

3 More Show Lassa Signs.

Times News Services

TORONTO — Three persons who were aboard a trans-Atlantic flight with a woman suspected of having deadly Lassa fever have shown symptoms of the rare African disease, a Toronto health official said today.

Dr. William Frank, director of the communicable disease centre for the Toronto Public Health Service, said his office has been contacted by "three people who have got symptoms of some sort."

"He said all were on the same flight as a St. Catharines, Ont., woman who is in hospital with a probable first-ever case of the disease in Canada.

Dr. Frank declined to identify the three persons but said all were residents of Metro-opolitan Toronto.

He said all have been advised to contact their doctors and stay at home. He said tests were being conducted on the three, but that no immediate plans had been made to forward the results to the centre for disease control in Atlanta.

The Ontario health ministry has ordered Etobicoke General Hospital in Toronto to stop admitting patients.

Olga Kamckey, 56, of St. Catharines, Ont., was admitted to the hospital Aug. 2 after she collapsed at Toronto International Airport following a flight from London.

Ontario Health Minister

Frank Miller said Thursday

the ministry's move in closing the hospital and subsequent surveillance of all known contacts was unprecedented in the province's history.

Dr. Alan Kruger, acting chief of staff at the hospital, said Thursday that Mrs. Kamckey still was in critical condition but was showing encouraging improvement.

Miller said it will not be known until early next week whether the woman is suffering from the disease, which kills between 30 and 50 per cent of persons who get it.

Protest.
Oct. 14.

OTTAWA (FP) — Mass meetings and picket lines are planned as the anchors of labor's national day of protest against wage controls which the Canadian Labor Congress announced Thursday would be held Oct. 14.

The date falls on the first anniversary of the wage and price controls program introduced by Prime Minister Trudeau as a means to fight inflation.

The day of the protest along with sketchy plans of action were announced by CLC President, Joe Morris at a news conference after a meeting of CLC executives and representatives of 110 affiliated unions.

He said that a nation-wide network of key union personnel had been set up to organize the day of protest which the CLC is refraining from calling a general strike.

The CLC has opposed wage controls from the start saying that it penalizes workers unfairly while doing little to control price increases.

The cement masons had been asking for parity with ironworkers.

Mothers Cool Violence

BELFAST (UPI) — Two thousand women marching out of the Roman Catholic ghettos of West Belfast have succeeded where police, politicians and the British Army failed.

They brought an abrupt stop Thursday to five days of Irish Republican Army violence and gave strife-torn Northern Ireland its most peaceful 24 hours in months, according to security officials.

The women, backed by 3,000 more who signed a petition demanding the provisional wing of the outlawed IRA cease its campaign of urban violence, were angered by the killing of three children earlier this week.

Joanne Maguire, 8, John 2, and Andrew, 2 months, were crushed to death when an automobile driven by a wounded, fugitive IRA gunman careened onto the sidewalk and pinned the children to an iron railing. Their mother, Anne, was hospitalized in critical condition.

Their deaths sparked a wave of anger among Catholic women in Belfast and dealt a blow to the IRA's campaign to drive British rule from the province.

A member of the provisional IRA's Belfast command staff said, "The Maguire family tragedy has done us no good at all. In the present situation it's quite clear that any further operations would further alienate the people of the area."

He said as a result of the women's hostility, the proviso-nals ordered a halt to all further action for the time being.

Police patrols reported that a group of housewives charging out of their houses earlier in the day chased off a group of teen-agers preparing to hijack vehicles and block traffic on an expressway out of Belfast.

In Londonderry, 30 miles west of Belfast, British troops arrested six youths in stone-throwing skirmishes after a two-mile march by 8,000 Protestants and 16 bands in the annual "apprentice boys" parade through the city.

Blacks Attempt To Burn Clinic

CAPETOWN — Gunfire was heard today in nearby Nyanga township and a large crowd of dissident blacks tried to set fire to a medical clinic as racial violence broke out in the Cape Town area for the third straight day.

At least 29 blacks have been killed and some 100 injured in the rioting that began Wednesday in the segregated black townships around the city.

Police said today the black suburbs of Langata, Guguletu and Nyanga were under control.

Police, however, have been placed on a nation-wide alert in case of more unrest.

"Our biggest headache now is the hooligan element and looters," said one senior police officer in Guguletu.

Hospital officials said more than 100 blacks have been wounded in the latest violence. At least 150 blacks and whites were arrested including 76 white students of the University of Cape Town who tried to stage a sympathy march with black students there.

Police minister Jimmy Kruger said the rioting around Cape Town, which has escaped major violence in the past, was the work of militants also responsible for nine days of unrest in black townships near Johannesburg, 950 miles to the north.

Firearms stores in Cape Town reported a run on guns by whites and one store said it sold out today.

Police commandant for the area, Col. J. H. Vorster, said commuter trains were running normally.

Mutiny On Mac-Blo Vessel?

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A MacMillan-Bloedel bulk carrier has been escorted into port here after her master reported a possible mutiny aboard, the U.S. Coast Guard said today.

The J. V. Clyne, a 593-foot vessel was at anchor off Coronado Island for the night, said Lieut. Arthur French of the coast guard station at Long Beach.

French said the master of the ship reported that 24 Chinese crew members aboard were on the bridge, French said, "but the master reportedly feared for their safety, as well as his own."

French said the ship was located about 30 miles off San Diego.

The official was not aware that any detachments have received the new ammunition but sources in Vancouver and the interior of B.C. said officers began switching to wad cutters about two weeks ago.

Five non-Chinese crew members aboard were on the bridge, French said, "but the master reportedly feared for their safety, as well as his own."

French said the ship was located about 30 miles off San Diego.

Cabinet Rejects Last-Ditch Pleas to Save CanCel

The provincial government has rejected a plea by the city of Prince Rupert and a major union there to continue the operation of the provincially-controlled Canadian Cellulose pulp mill.

The mill will close down this fall and will be converted from a sulphite to a kraft operation in the fall of 1978.

Both the city and the union, the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada, last month met Premier Bennett in an attempt to keep the sulphite operation going until all workers could be absorbed into the new operation.

Bennett ordered an economic study of the mill operation, which concluded that "after a careful examination of all the issues, and meeting with representatives of the company, the union and the community, there is no case for keeping the mill open beyond the closure date set by the company."

Bennett said Thursday the provincial cabinet will meet in Terrace Sept. 23 as "part of a major effort by the provincial government to come up with an economic development strategy to promote jobs in northwestern B.C."

The Terrace meeting is part of the premier's fall tour which will see cabinet meetings held in different cities in B.C. each week for about six weeks.

Bennett said the government and the federal department of manpower have joined forces to find jobs for about 300 workers who will be affected by the closure of the sulphite operation.

A special committee has been formed consisting of four CanCel officials, two representatives from the PPWC and the B.C. Government Employees Union which represents some of the pulp mill employees, three officials from the department of labor and three from the department of manpower.

The committee will "identify workers likely to be displaced, provide them with re-training opportunities and enter into re-establishment programs within CanCel's operations and through outside job placement," Bennett said.

Bennett said Manpower will provide exploratory grants for employees seeking jobs in other places and relocation assistance for those who find jobs elsewhere.

CanCel will deal with severance pay and possible early retirement allowances for displaced workers.

PROBE DEMANDED OF AIR CANADA

OTTAWA (UPI) — Progressive Conservative MP Dan McKenzie Thursday demanded an independent inquiry into Air Canada operations following a report of a record loss of $47.5 million during the first six months of 1976 by the company.

McKenzie, in a letter to Transport Minister Otto Lang said there were far too many "unanswered questions and charges concerning the operations of Air Canada."

He suggested the government had no controls over the Crown corporation, and added there have been demands in the past the auditor general look into the performance of the Air Canada finance branch as well as look into unprofitable routes, fleet size, and other internal operations.

McKenzie also asked Lang to make sure any further Air Canada fare increases are not approved by the Canadian Transport Commission until public hearings are held.

"Why should the public pay for Air Canada's mismanagement," he asked.

components bargained separately with the government and Thornber said the unlicensed executive of the marine component will insist on a return to individual bargaining.

"We demand our day in negotiations and we'll present figures for treasury board and we'll take whatever action is suitable at this time," he said.

A more equitable wage schedule is necessary, he said, especially when the top rate of an unlicensed employee is equal to that of a naval seaman, $6.52 an hour.

The delicate situation between unlicensed, licensed employees and the government cropped up this year when the proposed layoffs were first announced in June. Industrial Inquiry commissioner Hugh Ladner was appointed by Labor Minister Allan Williams to prevent a strike. His report was narrowly approved by the ships' officers' executive and supported by the unlicensed personnel.

Wages were not included in Ladner's terms of reference, and the licensed group delayed its vote on the report until after wages were negotiated.

A Wary Eye By Egypt On Libya

NATO 'Allies' Trade Charges

UNITED NATIONS (Reuters) — Greece and Turkey, NATO allies, accused each other in the UN Security Council Thursday night of endangering peace in the eastern Mediterranean.

The debate coincided with reports from Athens that Greece's armed forces were on war alert because of the dispute between the two countries over rights to resources in the Aegean Sea.

Foreign Minister Dimitri Botsis of Greece said in the council that Turkey has taken a cold-blooded decision to jeopardize peace by sending an oil-prospecting survey ship, Sismik I, into a disputed area of the Aegean.

"A mere accident might suffice to lose control of the situation," he said.

Ambassador Ilter Turkmen of Turkey, in a brief reply,

"protective step" and included infantry, armor, paratroopers and air defence units.

However, political sources said the buildup did not mean the two countries were about to go to war.

It was the first time in many years that Egypt had stationed troops along its western border. The bulk of the Egyptian armed forces usually is positioned along the eastern confrontation lines with Israel.

The new buildup will "not affect the strategic balance of the armed forces," the newspaper said. This presumably meant the size of forces manning the eastern lines has not been cut.

The newspaper said Libyan Col. Moammar Khadafy — whom the Cairo press now calls the "Madman of Libya" — has set up several bases along the border to train saboteurs for missions in Egypt.

In an obvious reference to the Soviet Union, Al Ahram said advisers from "a major power" supervised the training of the saboteurs and provided them with weapons.

Meanwhile, in Beirut, the Palestinians and their leftist Moslems Lebanese allies threatened today to avenge the fall of the Tal Zaatar Palestinian camp and vowed that Lebanon's civil war will continue.

Palestinian leader Farouk Kaddoumi said his men will "avenge Tal Zaatar elsewhere in Lebanon." Leftist papers said the Moslems may "escalate fighting in Christian-held mountain areas," through which Moslem villages are still scattered.

Jetfoil Begins September 17

The passenger hydrofoil daily service between Seattle and Victoria will begin Sept. 17, the B.C. Steamship Co. said Thursday.

Spokesmen for the steamship line and Boeing Marine Systems, which manufactures the vessel, said the service will run for six weeks on a test basis.

General manager Arthur Elworthy said the Boeing jetfoil, named the Flying Princess, will leave daily from Seattle's Pier 64 at 9 a.m. It will cruise at speeds of up to 50 miles an hour and take just under two hours to make the 80-mile trip to Victoria's Inner Harbour.

The hydrofoil will leave Victoria for the return to Seattle at 5:30 p.m. daily, Elworthy said.

The new buildup will "not affect the strategic balance of the armed forces," the newspaper said. This presumably meant the size of forces manning the eastern lines has not been cut.

SCANDAL FORCES HAYS TO QUIT

EAST LIVERPOOL, Ohio (AP) — Rep. Wayne Hays, whose relationship with Elizabeth Ray sparked a congressional payroll-sex scandal in Washington earlier this year, today withdrew as a candidate for re-election.

Hays, 65, submitted his resignation as a candidate to the Columbiana County Board of Elections here. The resignation was confirmed by his district office.

The resignation means the Democratic congressman, former chairman of the House Administration Committee, will leave office when his term expires in January.

Earlier, Hays had said he might drop out of the race if he felt such a move might wipe out Miss Ray's chances for more publicity.

OTTAWA (CP) — The provinces lack the information needed to control rents, and federal agencies should produce more information on the costs of providing rented accommodation, says the Canadian Council on Social Development.

It says rent controls are only a second-best solution, but are necessary because the economic system has been unable to provide adequate housing at a reasonable cost for all Canadians.

Tenants tend to be poorer than home-owners, and rents have been increasing faster than incomes — a trend which is likely to continue as long as the costs of land, construction and borrowing keep on rising, the report says.

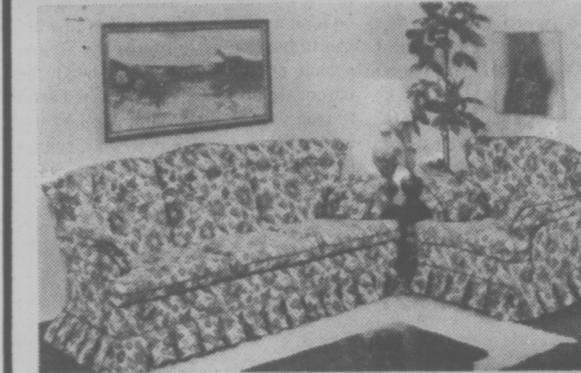

It says that replacing rent controls with housing subsidies for low-income households may be dangerous, since landlords could in effect expropriate a large part of these subsidies.

Flying in the Red

Air Canada's $47.5 million loss before taxes in the first six months of 1976 does not inspire public confidence in the management of this very public corporation. It would indicate that the airline is well on its way to its third annual loss. Increased fuel costs, strikes and a recessionary economy account for some of the ills, but when traffic is up eight per cent in the first six months of the year and the airline still can't make ends meet, the situation calls for closer examination.

About 50 per cent of Air Canada's problems this year are blamed on the pilot and air controller strike over bilingualism. The walkout is reported to have cost the airline $30 million in lost revenue and a net loss of $20 million as a result of the nine-day strike. While it is possible the airline may show marginal profit in its annual report, given a proposed 4.5 per cent fare hike in September, the future is not rosy. Fuel costs are still rising and the federal government recently introduced a 30 per cent increase in users' costs for landing fees and airport rentals. Another 20 per cent passenger security charge increase must be absorbed entirely by the airlines too. Nor has passenger traffic increased as much as the U.S. competition shows, reflecting slower recovery and lower spending in Canada. Looming on the horizon is a heavy capital investment in new airplanes to replace an aging fleet of low fuel efficiency DC-8 planes. Ten of these craft are to be mothballed during winter months to save costs.

Costs cuts are also being implemented by leaving jobs unfilled, and wonder of wonders, switching more seats to economy. First class seating on short run DC-9 flights (Victoria-Calgary, for example) will be eliminated entirely. On longer routes first class seating will be cut down. One of the reasons Air Canada is in such an unprofitable position now may stem from its rigidity in matters such as first class as opposed to "economy." It has always been an anomaly that a publicly-owned airline would seat its citizens on a class basis, especially since second class passengers heavily subsidized first class seating. When the paradox was pointed out to Air Canada officials they would note that a demand existed for first class service and that even Aeroflot, the state-owned Soviet airline, had first class accommodation. These arguments became even more lame with the introduction of wide-bodies jets of greater fuel efficiency that could carry up to 450 passengers. Most airlines, including Air Canada, limited seating to 350, providing a roomy cocktail lounge for those wishing to pay a premium. Had Air Canada taken a more egalitarian attitude years ago when the Boeing 747s and Lockheed 101s came along, unit passenger costs might have decreased, resulting in more traffic.

It's amazing how a cost crunch can jolt corporate thinking. But Air Canada is going to have to do more than rearrange the seats on its 52 DC-9s if it hopes to get into the black. In a country where air transport is the only efficient means of travel anymore, Canadian domestic traffic was up just 5.3 per cent in the first six months of the year. The figures should be higher. Still saddled with a few unprofitable domestic routes the airline should not be expected to head the corporate profit index. Yet there is no reason why it can't do as well as the competition, especially when it seems to be awarded most of the juicy overseas routes.

Suds For Slugs

Since a number of my friends and myself are against poisons and anything cruel with which to rid our gardens of slugs, etc., I am eager to share with others the recipes which I obtained from England on how to get rid of pests in a humane way.

We have tested them and found them excellent!

A soup plate or deepish bowl which is pushed down into the earth enough as to allow the slug to crawl over to the bowl and bend over and drink the nectar. This narcotic is nothing else but three parts beer to one part water, and one level tablespoon of sugar. Mix the sugar and water until well-absorbed, then add the beer. After dinner when it is dark and quiet, put the bowl out. In the morning you will find many little slugs dead, floating in the bowl. They have died a beautiful death, having drunk themselves tipsy. What a way to go!

I thought that your readers might be interested, especially those with tender hearts who would rather have the creatures, than buy the poisons which are on the market. — Mrs. Gallé V. Campbell, West Vancouver.

Industrial Safety

"Huh, big pay raises and all, damn workers got it made!" But he doesn't know how they made his good car, his wife's handsome polyester pant suit, or his frige with beryllium copper control. He hasn't read books like the 1974 Muscle and Blood, the massive, hidden agony of industrial slaughter in America, by Rachel Scott, writer in the Atlantic Monthly, the New Republic, and the Washington Post, and labor reporter for the Baltimore Sun.

The dust and fumes of beryllium, lighter than aluminum and stronger than steel, first used in fluorescent lamps and now in spacecraft, damage lungs, heart and liver of workers and wives who wash their clothes, with 30 per cent mortality, and warned as dangerous in the 1930s in Germany and Russia.

At viscose rayon plants, carbon disulphide, once used in British raincoat factories, where barred windows prevented suicidal workers from jumping out, damages the nervous system, adrenals, intestines, heart and blood vessels.

At the auto crankshaft table nothing above our heads to protect us. Two molds knocked me out. They took some x-rays and gave me Darvon and sent me back to job. The committee man knew I was hurt so they let me go home — two weeks on Darvon. I got no cervical x-rays. Dr. J. said "psychomatic." Finally at the hospital family doctor said: "Your neck is broken in three places."

Manning the cabs above the 2,300 degree F steel ingots, they work 20 minutes, 30 minutes off. "One guy's suit caught on fire."

In the 140 degree F. potrooms, where aluminum forms along with carbon monoxide and carbon dioxide and hydrogen fluoride, "pitch blows" occur from over-worked equipment. Fumes settle indoors so that the fumes are less visible to the public — N. Derrison, Victoria.

No Retaliation?

One of the unresolved problems that tripartite discussions could well address themselves to is the relationship between public and private sector remuneration. Pay in the public sector is not inherently limited by profitability and in the last few years two things seem to have been happening simultaneously. Genuinely underpaid workers have used a new economic clout to redress their situations and this, except in the eyes of the most reactionary people, is highly desirable. A healthy society is not going to be built on economic injustice. At the same time, however, the fact that public sector wages are not limited by profitability has been exploited by powerful unions, compounded until quite recently by a tendency on the part of many governments at all levels and their arbitrators to buy peace at any cost. This has inevitably had an effect on the private sector and the problem is far from resolved. A valid criticism of the anti-inflation Board is that, to date, it has done nothing to meet the problem.

To return to the other objection to political general strikes, the coercion of the individuals, members of the labor movement are not politically monolithic. They support all of the available parties. Yet, wherever their union has a closed shop agreement, they will be at risk if they refuse to support this strike. They can be denied their livelihood by suspension from their union, no matter how firmly Joe Morris claims there should be no retaliation. Politics are, and should be, a matter of individual conviction and decision, not of group manipulation. The intrusion upon basic freedoms is the most abhorrent aspect of this ill-conceived general strike.

than American industry reaches, that is a luxury we simply cannot afford.

Full employment seems to have become a forgotten goal and high unemployment something close to a forgotten problem. Any society which wishes to avoid serious tensions, however, must maintain a situation fairly close to full employment over the years. At the present time, this can only be achieved in this country on the basis of a large and growing export trade.

That in turn can only be achieved through a competitive economy, not one that prices its output out of the market places of the world. By the spring of 1975, the main trends in this portion of the 1890-1915 is English being jammed down everybody's throats. That the French language is now being returned to its position of equality should not be surprising to western Canadians. They should open their eyes and realize that Ottawa's conception of Canada is a bilingual-bicultural nation based on historical agreement. Like it or not, western Canada shares the BNA Act as a constitutional basis with the rest of the country and should accept the fact that Ottawa is moving to enforce that fact.

The schools have generally been the motive force behind bilingualism and the arena in which the conflict has been fought. Surely being able to function in two languages is a worthy goal of an education system. Mr. Gray seems to feel that if it is not English, it is not western Canadian. Who cares, Mr. Gray? I'm more concerned about what is good for Canada as a whole. If this includes the expenditure of about $200-300 million to maintain national unity, then the money is well spent. In huge budgets this is merely nickels and dimes, in this case well spent, compared to say national defence.

Mr. Gray should stay with writing books about alcohol and prostitutes, harmless areas which are entertaining but of no national importance. Canada is a large unified country with certain strains which need no petty separatists who are trying to disrupt something greater. To take pride in the actions of the Lethbridge city council in denouncing bilingual signs is as trivial and petty as W. A. C. Bennett taking down Trans-Canada Highway signs. I thought that your readers might be interested, especially those with tender hearts who would rather have the creatures, than buy the poisons which are on the market. — Mrs. Gallé V. Campbell, West Vancouver.

Gleam of Light

Many thanks are due to Frank Howard for explaining what happened to the capital punishment debate. Peering anxiously eastward searching for a gleam of light to penetrate the miasmic mists which shroud Ottawa, from our eyes, westerners tend to lose touch with affairs of state, but when it is explained that, well, it was hot in Ottawa, and possibly muggy too, then one can more readily understand an increase in fencitacide (fencitacitability) among our elected representatives. Climate plays such an important part in history, as Napoleon found out on his trip to Moscow. And such an innocuous-seeming thing as a high humidity rating can decide the fate of nations.

All very understandable, and one can appreciate the desire of our members of parliament for their summer holidays and a return to more temperate climates. There is just one thing which I find baffling. Could you please enlighten me as to the precise meaning of "fencitacitability"? — M. McKeon, 2745 Beach Drive.

(Editor's note: Fencitacitability means hypocrite or sneak.)

Samaritan

With all the putdown these days about most of our young people, I had an experience last Friday evening that showed there's still a lot of good to be said about them. I was out with three of my girl friends, and while driving down Port Street my car encountered radiator trouble, so consequently we were stalled with no sign of help.

Getting more desperate each minute, while cars went by full of people, some laughing and honking, a young fellow on a motorcycle and black leather jacket stopped to give us help. He proceeded to check out the car and the problem was found to be a broken radiator hose. He then got on his motorcycle and went looking for a phone booth to call a tow truck. When he arrived back, he offered us, complete strangers, the use of his car for the weekend. We gratefully declined. When the tow truck came we offered him a small gift token for our appreciation but he refused. It's too bad that most people put fellows in black leather jackets and on motorcycles all in the same category.

Mr. Gray interprets a necessity to anglicizing western Canada rather than the attack on Confederation that Quebec saw it as. What we have then in the period

Ugly Incident

I would like to relate to everyone an incident that happened to myself and a friend of mine on the way home on a city bus. It is hoped to get across to all citizens that handicapped people are human too and also have feelings.

My friend and I (both physically handicapped) were chatting when I noticed two boys aged between 12 and 14 talking. I realized they were talking about my friend so I kept my eye on them.

One of them nodded to me and said: "What about her?" The other answered something and the first boy replied: "She's retarded too!" When I heard that remark I spoke up and said: "We are not retarded, boys!"

They replied: "Are you drunk then?" It really hurts to hear remarks like that. I would rather people like that, and I'm including some adults who are just as thoughtless as some youngsters, come right out and ask us what is wrong with you, what is your disability or anything like that before they classify us physically handicapped citizens as retarded before you know the circumstances.

Just because we might not speak just right, walk the same as you are able to use our hands the same, we are not retarded. I think parents should teach their children the meaning of the words "physically handicapped" and if the parents and other adults and not only youngsters don't know the meaning themselves they should do a little research too. It would be one very important piece of education that everyone should know. — Janet Gallant, 880 Vernon Avenue.

Vandalism

I was left bewildered and incredulous after reading a letter in your Aug. 6 edition under the heading Punishment. The writer was presumably of the opinion (since it was never explicitly stated) that society should exercise tougher means of punishment if violent crime is to be effectively controlled. To support his position, the writer reports on the findings from five journal articles published in 1959, 1960, 1968, 1969 and 1971 and then audaciously extracts two lines from different pages of a recent criminology text.

May I point out that the efficacy of punishment as a means of changing people's behavior is far from conclusive. Whether it is the state's handling of its criminals or parents disciplining their children, punishment has occupied the minds of philosophers for centuries and social scientists for decades. The net result of all this deliberation and research is inconclusive and controversial. If there is any consensus forthcoming from the hundreds of articles and books written on the subject of punishment, it is that society should spend more time finding ways to reward acceptable behavior rather than dwelling upon punishing unacceptable behavior.

Not only do I disagree with the writer's opinions about punishment, but I suggest that the means by which he tries to justify his position is the worst kind of scientific vandalism. — Colin S. Sheppard, 830 Phelps Avenue.

Waging War Against Drugs, Small-Town Style

ST. ALBANS, Vt. — Paul D. Lawrence came into this town in August, 1973 like Wyatt Earp.

There were hippies all over Taylor Park and along Main Street then, and the city fathers in effect wanted a hired gun to clean up the little town.

Within a year, the detective had made more than 100 arrests, organized the biggest drug raid in the state's history, was expanding his work into other parts of northern New England and was being considered to head a planned state-wide drug enforcement agency. But now Paul Lawrence is himself in jail. A special state commission finished reviewing last week 240 cases brought by Lawrence and it has recommended that all of those arrested be pardoned.

Gov. Thomas P. Salmon, calling the Lawrence affair "a sad day for law enforcement," has said that he would issue a pardon to anyone convicted on Lawrence's word alone.

A special prosecutor appointed by the governor has determined that all but one of the 106 arrests made by Lawrence in the St. Albans area were fraudulent. The prosecutor is convinced that most of the drugs entered as evidence came from the New York State Police Crime Laboratory.

"It was lawlessness of the first order," said the special prosecutor, Robert Gensberg. The story of Paul Lawrence is the story of clashing generations and values in "American life. Among the merchants and storekeepers of St. Albans there are many who still think Lawrence did a good job.

"We wish that Lawrence had been able to make the arrests legally. We do feel sorry about that," said Mayor Melvin Kain in the back of his shoe store the other day. "But feeling as we do that he got the right ones, we feel it's unfortunate the way things turned out."

It was shocking, the mayor recalled, when the changes of the 1960s that townspeople had read about in magazines rippled into this quiet backwater near the Canadian border.

Suddenly, it seemed, there were dirty, long-haired ragged youths drinking beer at all hours in the park in the centre of town. At the local high school there was talk of heavy drug use. The school refused to let one youth graduate because of his long hair. Drifters wandered into town.

It was all a bit much for a town of 8,000.

"It was an outrageous scene, really outrageous," recalled Otto Kremer, a lively bearded former proprietor of Tuner's Place, a bar.

Kremer and others close to the scene concede that there were a lot of drugs around at the time and that one of those arrested by Lawrence, Ronald Rich, now in federal prison on drug charges, was an important figure in illicit drug traffic from Canada.

But, they said, the drugs were those of the counterculture, primarily marijuana, LSD, and amphetamines (known as "speed"), rather than the heroin found prominently in the arrests made by Lawrence.

"It was a tough time," said Mayor Kain, remembering the fear of the drugs and how the young people went on the welfare rolls. "We were in a real quandary. The laws seemed to be much more in favor of those accused, and the law enforcement officers had both hands tied behind their backs. The city council was alarmed. The taxpayers were demanding action."

So the city council voted $8,000 to hire Paul Lawrence as an undercover narcotics agent.

Lawrence had met and impressed Police Chief George Hebert. A former state trooper, Lawrence was then chief of the four-man department in the town of Vergennes.

But Lawrence, who was then 28 and now is 31, was not all that he seemed. He was discharged from the army shortly after basic training for "character and behavior disorders." He resigned from the state police in October 1971, shortly before an internal report found that he had beaten a handcuffed prisoner with a flashlight.

Much of Lawrence's work had been devoted to narcotics cases, some of them controversial. In the Brattleboro area in 1970, he testified in two cases that he had, at the same time, purchased drugs from two different people in two different places. Suspicious, the county prosecutor would no longer take Lawrence's cases unless he took a polygraph test, which he refused to do. When he was police chief in Vergennes, the county prosecutor there also would not take Lawrence's cases.

Officials in St. Albans, however, knew none of this, and townspeople voiced approval as Lawrence's efforts led to the first wave of arrests of 27 "longhairs."

Sale of heroin, the charges read, heroin, cocaine, LSD, heroin, heroin . . .

The young people shouted that they were being framed. No one knew the undercover agent. Then Lawrence would testify at a hearing on whether the liquor licence at Tuner's should be rescinded. But the youths said that none of their

New York State Police laboratory in Albany. Chief Hebert gave him roughly $12,500 for his supposed drug buys. The money was never recovered or used as evidence.

Gensberg, who investigated the cases later, found that the samples of heroin turned in by Lawrence were a fraction of a normal street sale and that he was supposedly "paying 10 to 15 times" the normal price. Gensberg's suspicions were also aroused by the extraordinary number of heroin buys in a small town.

Throughout the fall and winter there were more arrests and swift convictions. Defence lawyers were unable to get into evidence their testimony challenging Lawrence's credibility. Finally, the defendants began plea bargaining.

In Swanton, meanwhile, the next town north, the Missiquoi Valley Union High School Board voted more than $4,000 to have Lawrence look into drugs there.

Then the bubble broke. Because he became too widely known in the area, Lawrence was lent to the police department in Burlington, just across the county line. He was assigned to work with a detective, Kevin Bradley.

Bradley became suspicious of his new partner and arranged for the shaggy-haired cousin of another policeman to pretend to be a drug dealer. Twice, Lawrence asserted that he had bought drugs from the man when he had not, according to the police.

At roughly the same time, the Chittenden County prosecutor, Patrick Leahy, who was then running successfully for the United States Senate, became alarmed by Lawrence's reputation and devised a scheme to trap him.

He borrowed an undercover man, Michael F. Schwartz, from the Brooklyn district attorney's office. A mug shot was taken of Schwartz, and a false police record describing him as a drug dealer was placed in the Burlington police files. He was given a nickname: "the Rabbi."

After being searched and wired for sound, Schwartz was sent out to sit on a park bench behind city hall while the police watched from a nearby hotel room. Lawrence drove down the street, spotted Schwartz, and, without talking to him or even walking through the park, returned to the police station and said he had made a heroin buy, according to testimony at his trial.

Lawrence was arrested the next day and Governor Salmon appointed the special prosecutor to look into the affair. Lawrence was convicted and sentenced to a four-to-eight year term on charges of a false buy from Schwartz.

Gensberg, the prosecutor, brought perjury charges against him for two counts of lying about his military record and got a sentence of up to 10 years. Gensberg also secured indictments on four other counts — one defendant was in jail at the time of his supposed drug sale and another was with his probation officer — but decided not to prosecute them, he said, in order to concentrate on reviewing the cases for pardon.

At the state prison farm in Windsor, Lawrence maintained his innocence in a telephone interview. "I had a surveillance on a place where a lot of dealing was going on, and it led to the state's attorney, who is now a senator, and a lot of his assistants who were dealing," he said. "That's why I got busted. Leahy needed the liberal vote. It was all political."

In St. Albans, defence lawyers have filed multi-million-dollar lawsuits against the city, Lawrence and other officials.

to 4.5 per cent a year, and the most militant are keeping that promise. Strikes are down to the lowest level in 20 years.

A cynic would find tactical or personal explanations for the current union policy, but I think something longer-lasting may be involved. It is illustrated by the experience of a Conservative member of Parliament from a manufacturing district near Oxford.

Two years ago this MP visited a factory in his district that makes automobile heaters.

As he walked through, the workers jeered him and shouted about the company's fat profits. This year, a union delegation visited him at the House of Commons and asked him to help get new business for the heater company. The workers were afraid that its profits were not high enough to assure their jobs.

Economically, pressures are going to increase. The fall in the pound's value is pushing up the cost of imported goods. The annual rate of consumer price increases, 29 per cent last August, is now below 14 per cent. That is a sharp improvement — but still hard for the family living on the margin to bear. How long can voluntary wage restraint last?

Politically, the question of immediate interest is the price that has to be paid for union cooperation. The Labor government has pushed through Parliament this session a number of bills that strike outsiders as at best irrelevant to real national concerns: nationalizing aircraft and shipbuilding companies, for example. That kind of legislation is generally viewed as a concession to union and left-wing postures.

The formulas of yesteryear still have a remarkable grip on this country. For example, public housing is so heavily subsidized now that rents cover only $43 of every $100 in cost — and those homes are not reserved for the needy. Anyone earning more than $35,000 a year pays in taxes 83 cents of every dollar he makes over that amount. The marginal tax rate could be cut from 83 to 70 per cent with only a trivial loss of government revenue, but the symbol of soaking the rich is treasured.

The question is whether, or when, the unions will allow reform in such areas.

For many years now Britain has been on a long, slow slide in wealth and power. Even an optimist would have a hard time maintaining that the fundamental reasons for that decline — the preference for comfort over competition, the politics of envy, the low investment — have changed. The new prime minister, James Callaghan, is a comfortable type who was described by one analyst, Joe Rogaly of The Financial Times, as an ancient mariner presiding with an easy smile over the country's decline.

Politically, the question of immediate interest is the price that has to be paid for union cooperation. The Labor government has pushed through

Thomson's Ledger Told It All

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — Years ago in a Diefenbaker cabinet there was a minister (whom I'll leave unnamed) with crude and crassness in outlook and behavior.

As one of his executive assistants said: "Only his mother could love him."

Once I was talking politics with Roy Thomson of Fleet Street in his London office and brought up this particular minister.

"Is he any goddamned good?" I was asked.

I was hesitant. I huffed and puffed a bit while canvassing with myself on how direct I should be.

"Well, I'll tell you about him," said Lord Thomson. "I, myself, have the gall of a canal horse. Finesse I haven't . . .

but that guy makes me think I'm modest and a diplomat. He doesn't bother me that much but how the hell does he get anybody to vote for him?"

Another time, indeed the first time I had a long session with Roy Thomson, I said that I'd come to see him on two grounds: the generally skimpy and low quality of the Port Arthur News-Chronicle and the ferocious bias that the paper had against me, the local member of Parliament.

I went on, with detail, describing the almost moronic ignorance of the local publisher

Even after the perspective of 18 years I feel that Roy Thomson told me exactly and honestly what he knew and thought on both matters.

I made both my points by telling him that in my successful campaign to beat The Rt. Hon. C. D. Howe in the election of 1957 the local Thomson paper had honored me only once on any of 40 to 50 public occasions in the campaign. Just once it had sent a reporter to write the story of a meeting which I addressed.

"Well, I'll tell you about him," said Lord Thomson. "I, myself, have the gall of a canal horse. Finesse I haven't . . . but that guy makes me think I'm modest and a diplomat. He doesn't bother me that much but how the hell does he get anybody to vote for him?"

He loved the story, belly-laughing and shaking like jelly. He told me to remember that kid and see where he got. He himself had been ordinary at best in school and had about the same amount of high school. (Indeed, the young man had done well though not as a reporter.)

I went on, with detail, describing the almost moronic ignorance of the local publisher about public affairs and the rigid, narrow 19th century views of the young editor recently imported from outside Ontario. He listened, nodding and smiling. Then he waved me over to a table on which there were many big books.

It turned out that these were ledgers. He opened one to a section devoted to the Port Arthur News-Chronicle. He got close to the page, peering at the figures as he ran a stubby finger along. "Look at this . . .

The gist was that the News-Chronicle was among the top three papers in his empire in terms of profit on investment and profit on revenue. "So you can see," he said, "Mr. B. — is a wonderful publisher for me."

As for the editor, all he knew was that he was an ambitious young man without big ideas on what he was worth. He came cheaper than the previous editor. Had I heard any complaints about the man's editorials from the business community? I hadn't.

He grinned: "You see, Doug. He's probably pretty sound. It's just that you're away out in television shows — the slam-bang, sock 'em in the mouth type of cartoons.

The kids, it seems, were coming to school prepared to maul each other. The teachers didn't like that one bit.

I now know they have a point. I've watched the effect of television on my own child and some of what I see I don't like. His vocabulary, for instance, has become increasingly violent. He is forever killing me or dying himself or shooting something or someone with any household article that in the least way resembles a gun. He is sometimes a monster or a pirate or simply a bad guy. He talks of jail and at night, when the lights are out, strange creatures come a-

This was one of those moments that all parents fear, the ones we've read about in countless books about child raising. One false step on our part, we've been told, and the child would be scarred, doomed to life as a pervert, pyromaniac or, worse yet, a Republican. My wife and I looked at each other, wondering what to say. Finally, I seized the initiative.

"When did this happen?" "On the 'Young and The Restless,'" he said. "On television." On television! My first impulse was to go downstairs and kick in the set. Then I laughed. But television programming is no laughing matter. Every parent has some horror story to tell, and the preschool where my child is enrolled once devoted a whole PTA session to the subject. The teachers, it turned out, were plenty concerned about the content of some children's persons. Someone said that most of these letters are now kept in the network files. Local programming, it seemed, was clean.

But there were plenty of complaints about the content of news shows — complaints about such subjects as homosexuality or prostitution being covered on the local news.

There were complaints, too, about certain commercials, particularly those dealing with feminine hygiene products. One woman said she would no longer allow her 15-year-old daughter to watch television because of a Tampon commercial she has seen. These parents were upset. They did not want their children to learn about these things from television.

I came away believing there can be no single standard for us all. I have my own complaints. I think, for instance, that nothing could be more tasteless than Hogan's Heroes — a show that does violence to history by depicting life in a POW camp as fun and Nazis as lovable bumbler. Instead of finding allies in the files, I found enemies — people who wanted to ban programs I enjoy, people who want to dictate coverage of the news.

So I can live with their news shows. I suggest they do what I did when I learned that Chris's sister had been raped. I pulled the plug.

BOUND FOR NORWAY, the Andoc drilling platform is towed by six tugs out of Rotterdam harbor. At the end of the two-week trip, the rig will be moored inshore for finishing work, then will be moved to a North Sea site to start work. The four pylons on the concrete platform are each more than 300 feet high.

Saw Dumping Duty Stays

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
OTTAWA — Dumping of home and farm-use chain saws manufactured by McCulloch Corp. and the importer of McCulloch, a division of Emerson Electric Co. of Shoreview, La., has caused material injury to domestic chain saw production, according to the Anti-Dumping Tribunal.

As a result of the Tribunal's finding, a temporary dumping duty imposed May 12 on the two brands of U.S.-made chain saws imported into Canada will remain in effect. The duty reflects the margin of the dumping.

The chain saws in question are gasoline-powered, with engines of 2.5 inches or less displacement.

One of the major domestic chain saw producers serving the Canadian market, Dessa Industries Ltd. of Toronto, had originally launched a formal complaint of dumping against the McCulloch and Beard-Poulan chain saws.

Evidence presented to the Tribunal showed that during 1975 both Dessa and Homelite-Terry, a division of Textron Canada Ltd. of Pointe Claire, Que., the two major domestic producers, lost a very important share of the Canadian market to McCulloch and Beard-Poulan.

While the Tribunal felt it was clear that the greatly increased sales of dumped imports by McCulloch Canada have caused the loss of accounts to Dessa and market share to the domestic industry, it said the effects of dumping of Beard-Poulan may not be so obvious.

Simpsons-Sears Ltd. of Toronto, described as one of 1976 by a significant margin, the Tribunal noted.

McCulloch Canada, a subsidiary of McCulloch Corp. and the importer of McCulloch, a division of Emerson Electric Co. of Shoreview, La., has caused material injury to domestic chain saw production, according to the Anti-Dumping Tribunal.

In 1975, Simpsons-Sears increased its imports of "Craftsman" chain saws produced by Beard-Poulan by 19 per cent compared to 1974. In 1975, Simpsons-Sears purchased 28 per cent fewer Homelite saws than it did in 1974.

In the first quarter of 1976, Simpsons-Sears imports from Beard-Poulan increased by 70 per cent compared to the same period in 1975.

While Homelite was not as seriously affected as Dessa by the dumped imports in 1975, it did in fact suffer an important reduction in sales and profitability in that year, according to the Tribunal.

The Tribunal adds that the low level of sales and profitability reported by Homelite for the first quarter of 1976 "fully supports the concern expressed at the great surge of the dumped imports of both exporters in the first quarter of 1976."

ENTEBBE LINKED TO ISTANBUL

ISTANBUL (UPI) — Turkish officials say Arab terrorists who attacked passengers in Istanbul airport have claimed membership in a radical Palestinian faction, but a spokesman for the group denied responsibility for the attack.

The two guerrillas, interrogated by police, admitted "they were members of the George Habash group," Istanbul bul Gov. Namik Kemal Sen-turk said Thursday.

Habash is the leader of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, a radical organization blamed for the hijacking of an Air France jetliner to Entebbe, Uganda, last month.

In Beirut, a spokesman for the PFLP denied any responsibility for the attack and said the group had nothing to do with the gunmen.

$14,818 to Help Women

A Victoria project called Prime Time has received a $14,818 grant from the federal health and welfare department to help women through their middle years.

The money will be used to set up a place where women can go for assistance offered by other women — both professional helpers and women who are experiencing similar problems. Maflay Callahan, president of the B.C. Association of Social Workers, said Thursday.

"It will attempt to reach women who have the least opportunities because of poverty, health and family problems."

Garage Decision Deferred

New regulations for commercial garages in Oak Bay ran into opposition at a public hearing Thursday.

Council decided to defer action on the proposed change, plus zoning to single-family housing from commercial classification at 2238 to 2235 Oak Bay Avenue, until three vacationing council members return.

A tea and coffee shop at 2540 Windsor, which drew no public opposition, was approved by council.

Lawyer Alan Patterson, representing Saunders and Hitchman Sales and Service at 2040 Cadboro Bay Road, said the restriction to five parked vehicles on a lot is people parking on neighborhood streets.

The question of parking cars, as opposed to storing cars, was not defined and "we suggest that this would lead to considerable argument between representatives of our client and the municipality as to whether a car was, in fact, stored or parked."

He said it isn't unusual for 50 to 60 and more cars to be parked on the lot at one time and it would be impossible to build a structure to cover all of them.

"Our clients can understand the desire of the council not to proliferate used car lots throughout the municipality, but we suggest that this particular location where a car lot has long been situated is not offensive to the residents of Oak Bay," he said.

Council's plan to down-zone the commercial area facing Oak Bay Avenue, between Monterey and Oliver, was opposed by the Foote family, owner of the bulk of the property, and several others.

Lawyer Alan Emery said the change "just doesn't make sense." The property was surrounded by commercial and apartment zones along Oak Bay Avenue and the present zoning had existed for many years.

Earth, As Seen from Mars, Is a Very Fragile Small Blue Dot

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — A scientist would like to focus Viking 2's cameras on earth so mankind may realize its home planet is really a small and "very fragile" thing.

"If we took a color picture what we would see would be a very small dot of light," Dr. James Pollack said in an interview Thursday. "It would be colored bluish.

"I'm going to take a hard look at the numbers," he said. "I would like to take that picture."

"I quite frankly think the most important thing the space program has done is to give man a better view of earth — that he is on a very fragile thing and that from the perspective of other parts of the solar system, not a very big object," the scientist said.

Pollack, of the project's lander imaging team, said the craft's cameras were now being used as astronomical observatories, taking pictures of the two Martian moons and determining how much sunlight is lost through the planet's thin atmosphere.

Viking 2 is scheduled to join Viking 1 on Mars early next month. Any picture of earth would have to wait until Viking 2 is safely parked on Mars.

Pictures taken by Viking 1 show Martian skies are laden with dust that blur the sun, much like smog over a large city on earth, scientists report.

RECREATION USE ONLY FOR LOTS

Owners of 231 undersized lots on the west side of Shallowan Lake will be severely restricted in future development if Cowichan Valley Regional Board has its way.

The board has ordered a bylaw amendment which will include a seasonal recreation-use-only clause for lots under 7,500 square feet.

Shallowan Lake director Dick Stephenson said earlier that there was a precedent for such a move and the department of municipal affairs, which must approve the amendment, would likely sympathize with the restrictions.

"This is a big step and we are just starting out... I expect there will be some protest but it has to be done," Stephenson stated, adding that new restrictions would not apply to people who already have houses on the undersized lots.

Recommended features of the amendment for the undersized lots would be:

—Properties within the zone are for seasonal use only.

The season will be defined as the period of "high summer" or 129 days from May 22 to Sept. 27.

Cost Rising On Pipeline

WASHINGTON (AP)

Delays are getting Alaskan natural gas to energy-short areas of the country could result if Congress insists on approving the route for a proposed pipeline, administration officials said Thursday.

"The longer we delay, the more expensive such a project will be," John A. Hill, deputy administrator to the Federal Energy Administration, told a House Commerce subcommittee.

Soviet delegate Sergei Smirnov and Iranian delegate Manouchehr Ganji at once demanded the withdrawal of MacDermot's memorandum, which had been distributed through the meeting hall.

It All Started in the Pool

Built and launched in the British port of Southampton, the 60-foot steel-hulled Ratsy III made her way into Victoria's Inner Harbor this week.

Ratsy III stands out in a time when it has become commonplace for Canadians to go boat-hunting overseas.

She was designed by her owner, Jim Rattenbury, a retired Vancouver engineer and a distant relative of the late Franklin Rattenbury, who designed the Legislative Buildings and other landmarks around the city.

Ratsy III is designed for ocean cruising and has proved her efficiency for the past four years while Jim and Connie Rattenbury, with son Dallas, roamed the world.

She carries 3,000 gallons of diesel oil in bilge tanks designed to create stability and has a cruising range of 6,000 miles.

When Rattenbury first began planning his latest invention he made models, testing them in the pool of a Vancouver tennis club until he had one that would be self-righting.

Close Down Prison —Inmates

MONTREAL (CP) — Sixteen prisoners at Laval Detention Centre filed an injunction Thursday in Quebec Superior Court demanding that the maximum-security institution be closed down because conditions there pose a threat to their health and lives.

Among the prisoners seeking the injunction are Paul Rose and Bernard Lortie, both serving sentences connected with the October, 1970, kidnapping and murder of Quebec cabinet minister Pierre Laporte.

In particular, the group seeks to have cell block one of the federal penitentiary closed. They say their cells are vermin-ridden, but are sprayed with insecticides only once a month.

The upper part of her cabin-work is steel to cut down weight topsides. In case of emergency, her twin booms used for loading, are fitted out with sails.

During their European roambings, the Rattenburys carried a small car on Ratsy III's large afterdeck. The car was discarded in favor of an emergency rescue boat on the Atlantic crossing.

Equipped with the most modern of electronics, Ratsy III is also air-conditioned and has central heating.

Rattenbury says he chose the Joyce Marine shipyard in Southampton, because it was the only place he could afford to have Ratsy III built.

Launched in 1972, the four brothers who own the yard built the hull and decks, Rattenbury completing the inside work.

His wife and son don't take him seriously when he says his next invention will be a "recreational amphibious vehicle."

"But with mooring space almost non-existent in Vancouver a houseboat with wheels makes a lot of sense," he explains with a smile.

Marine Charts Scarce

A number of west coast marine charts are in short supply...because of production problems, partly caused by the bilingualism program, and the pressure of annual summer pleasure boating demand.

Fred Smithers, regional head of chart production for Environment Canada, said there is no excuse for going without a particular chart,

The chart section has had many complaints from north Vancouver Island that chart 3591, Cape Lazo to Discovery Passage, cannot be obtained because it has been withdrawn pending its reissue in bilingual form.

Smithers said the bilingualism program has slowed down chart production to some extent, but that is not the whole problem.

If the section anticipates an inability to meet a publication deadline it will reissue an old chart up-dated with the latest information.

Meanwhile, it takes longer to publish bilingual because west coast charts must be translated in Ottawa before they are approved for printing, which is another problem.

"This year we finally managed to get the printing and publishing on the west coast, at Evergreen Press, in Vancouver," Smithers said.

There have been growing pains, staff training and expansion to cope with to ensure the high quality demanded by multiple-color, detailed charts for marine pilotage.

"We're new at this game and we're trying desperately," Smithers said.

"But, returning to chart 3591, anyone unable to get that particular copy which covers one of the finest salmon fishing grounds on the coast, should ask for chart 3579, which is on a smaller scale.

"It's not what we recommend for cruising," the cartographer said, "but it's better than no chart, and we advise simply, don't go into the shoal areas."

Despite the Hikes, Air Fares 'Cheap'

OTTAWA (CP) — The domestic air passenger, travelling economy, was paying less than travellers in most other parts of the world last year.

But a Canadian government office of tourism report, released Thursday, says domestic economy fares rose more sharply in 1974 and 1975 than economy ticket prices in other countries.

The report on passenger air transport, and tourism says the tourism office is adopting a new policy of encouraging use of mass transport like commercial air service to conserve fuel—particularly for long trips.

This was to comply with the federal energy conservation program. But the tourism office would continue to promote car travel for short-distance trips.

The report is an updated version of a study done for the 1973 and 1974 federal-provincial conferences on tourism. A tourism office official said there may be a 1975 study to bring findings up to date.

There have been four domestic fare increases in just over two years, the latest an eight-per-cent boost in April. Fares will go up another 8.5 per cent Sept. 1.

A tourism office official said he does not know how domestic economy air fares now compare with similar rates in other countries. But he noted there have been fare increases in the United States and on transatlantic routes this year.

Reducing ticket prices to cents per passenger mile, the report concludes that economy class air travel is cheaper in Canada than on foreign routes throughout most of 1975.

The report says fares within the U.S. were cheaper in July, October and December, 1975.

The Vancouver-Honolulu prices were also cheaper in those months and in April, 1975.

Domestic economy ticket prices were less expensive than fares on all other foreign routes throughout the year.

The report noted that while automobile travel dominates trips by Americans into Canada, airlines have been taking an increasing share of the remaining travel market.

In the 1968-1974 period, the airline percentage rose to five per cent from three per cent, placing airlines a distant second behind automobiles that accounted for 87 per cent of the trips.

Jan. 1, 1977.

Imperial Oil Ltd. of Toronto had already applied for permission to export 7,600,000 barrels of heavy fuel oil to Cliffs Fuel Service Corp. of Rapid River, Mich. and to export another 18,250,000 barrels to Consumers' Power Co. of Essexville, Mich., both for five-year periods starting Jan. 1, 1977.

The National Energy Board has decided to hold a combined public hearing on all four export applications, starting Sept. 13 in Ottawa. Deadline for filing interventions is Sept. 3.

Gulf Pushes Pipeline Demands

OTTAWA (FP) — Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. of Toronto has sent a letter to Prime Minister Trudeau, several senior cabinet ministers and the new president of Petro-Canada reasserting Gulf's sense of urgency and priority about speedy construction of a Mackenzie Valley gas pipeline by Canadian Arctic Gas Pipeline Ltd. of Toronto.

The letter, Gulf says, "that in its view there will be a domestic gas shortage in the early to mid-1980s and that already sufficient volumes have been found in the Mackenzie Delta region to meet this shortfall, should a Mackenzie Valley pipeline be built."

Personal Reporting Set In Three UIC Centres

OTTAWA (FP) — Unemployment insurance claimants in three cities must appear at offices of the Unemployment Insurance Commission to fill their claim cards under an experimental program beginning Monday, a UIC spokesman said Thursday.

Purpose of the six-month experiment in Regina, Kingston, Ont., and Chicoutimi, Que., is to decrease paper work, help claimants find jobs and cut down cheating, the spokesman said in an interview.

If the experiment succeeds, it may be extended to other areas.

The project is an extension of an interview program which began April 1.

The spokesman said the experiment will help personalize UIC services and assist individuals who might take advantage of various manpower programs.

Checks can also be done on the signatures of the claimants, he added.

But the spokesman said benefit control was only one aspect of the experiment, which follows an earlier one in the Kitsilano UIC office in Vancouver.

AMERICAN FINAL IN SENIORS GOLF

Defending champion Harry Weston of Portland and Iv Parent of Seattle advanced to the championship final of the Seniors North West Golf Association tournament with 4 and 3 victories Thursday at Victoria Golf Club.

The two Americans were scheduled to meet in the final earlier today.

Weston eliminated Gordon Miller of Royal Colwood in one semi-final while Parent ousted Walt Daggatt of Seattle.

Three-Way Shootout

OTTAWA (CP) — The Governor-General's Prize competition, top individual event in Canadian shooting, looks like being a close shoot-out between the top men of Canada and Britain.

A computer check on the first and second-stage scores showed Ron Clark of Burlington, Ont., sharing the lead with former winner Ray Bramley of Church Street, England, and Brian Hornsey of Greasby, England, all three of whom have 248 out of a possible 255 points.

Bates Bid For No. 7

Victoria Bates will be shooting for title No. 7 when they open defence of their B.C. Senior A Men's Softball championship at Central and Athletic Parks on Saturday.

Six times in the past seven years, Bates have won the provincial championship, going on to the Canadian finals for the last five years.

Last year, of course, the ultimate was achieved, Bates winning the Canadian championship and then representing Canada in the world championships at New Zealand this spring. Bates finished in a three-way tie with New Zealand and the United States for the world title.

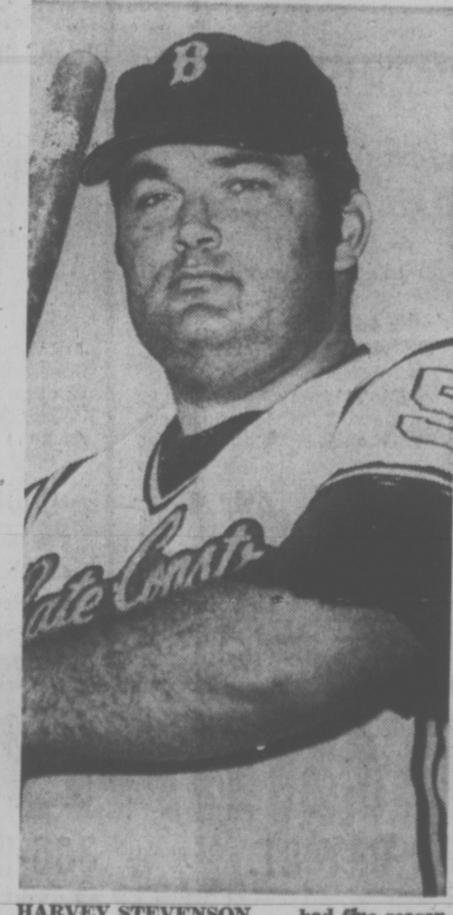

This season, Bates already have won the Pacific Coast Fastball League regular-season championship and also the playoff crown and they will be meeting two teams again this weekend which contested the PCFL playoffs. Vancouver Magicians and New Westminster Royal Tower Blues are entered in the four-team double knockout competition along with Abbotsford. All are member clubs of the PCFL.

Bates will meet the Magicians at the opening game at 3 p.m. at Central Park while Abbotsford will clash with New Westminster at 5 p.m. The tournament will then switch to Athletic Park with the losers of the first two games meeting at 7 p.m. and the winners clashing at 9 p.m.

Pitcher Stan Kern who has been suffering from a recurring finger injury on his pitching hand, has been working out and it is reported that his split-index finger has recovered sufficiently for him to be at or near his best.

The other problem player, Reg Underwood, who has been playing despite an injured back, is also expected to fully recover.

In pitching, Dave Ruthowsky was tops for the season with a 12-2 record. Kern had 9-1 and Andy Konopacki 9-1. Shortstop Bob Holmes of Bates led the league in home runs with eight and runs-batted-in with 34. Outfielder Harvey Stevenson was second with seven home runs and also in runs-batted-in with 26. Ken Bates topped the team with a .354 average.

Victoria Shamrocks are still very much alive in their Western Lacrosse Association semi-final playoff series with Vancouver Burrards and it may be because of a phone call.

The Shamrocks Thursday night tripped up the Burrards 19-14 before 1,875 fans at Memorial Arena to force a sixth game in the best-of-seven series, which Burrards lead three games to two, and the player who helped set the scoring pace was the one who made the call.

Forward Ron MacNeil, who had been benched Sunday when the Shamrocks edged Burrards 9-8 and again on Tuesday when Burrards scored a 10-6 victory in Richmond for missing a team practice Saturday, called coach Nirmal Dillon, asked when the next practice was, turned up and was installed in the lineup again Thursday.

To show his appreciation MacNeil scored four goals, the most crucial probably being his third when he came from behind the goal to beat Burrards' goalie Dave Evans cleanly and give the Irish a 14-12 lead in the third period and cut off a Burrard rally that had seen them close the gap to 13-12.

That was just an ordinary fake and quick shot, but the move MacNeil made earlier was the classic of the night. It was late in the second period with the Rocks holding a precarious 12-10 margin. MacNeil was just outside the crease and being checked and held by a Burrard player. He waved for the ball from Pete Rushton, caught it one-handed, turned, and in almost a single motion beat Evans off the post.

Those goals turned the tide. Twice.

Burrards took advantage of the letdown to move ahead 18-17 at 18:27 of the first period on a goal by Taki Vohalis, his first of three.

But Rushton came back to score on a power play before the buzzer and the Irish were even, and settled down.

The second period was the exact opposite of the first and it wasn't until the 7:31 mark that Green put the Shamrocks ahead, and ahead to stay as it turned out, although Burrards were never that far away that a quick rally could have turned things around.

The key to the game was the fact the Shamrocks played their game. They ran, moved the ball and took good shots, something they hadn't been doing in the earlier contests.

Bob Parry, Burrards' general manager agreed, "They played well," he said; "when they move that ball they're tough, and they weren't moving it in Richmond on Tuesday."

Coach Dillon of the Shamrocks echoed those thoughts, as he has done all year. "We were better," he said, "because we moved."

Dillon, who won a big majority of the faceoffs, had two goals and three assists. Joe McCrea also had a pair for the Irish.

The victory didn't come easily and for a time it even appeared that the Rocks might have given up the ghost when they blew a 5-1 first-period lead.

George Grover came on in the second period to play goal, and play well, for the Rocks after Skip Chapman had performed in the opening 20 minutes; and if Grover wasn't as busy as Chapman had been earlier, he was solid when it counted.

David Evans played most of the game for Burrards but didn't exhibit his usual mastery — perhaps because, as Parry said, "the Shamrocks were shooting better." Veteran Don Hamilton came on for a brief time in the opening period. But he appeared rusty.

Shamrocks played without team scoring leader Ivan Thompson, who suffered a shoulder injury at Richmond.

Tuesday, Thompson is expected to play in the sixth game Monday and it's possible that Tommy Black, who has been sidelined for the past three weeks with a leg injury, will also be available.

Seventh game, if necessary, will be played here Wednesday. Fans wishing to make the trip to Richmond for Monday's game are asked to contact a Shamrock director.

BCSA Heading for Deep Water?

The B.C. Sailing Association is again in the boat-owning business.

President Paul Cote Jr. reports the BCSA now has a 17-foot Boston whaler with a 30 horsepower Mercury outboard engine which, along with race marks and other gear, can be loaned to any BCSA club for racing or teaching sessions.

One can't help but wonder if this latest acquisition isn't a waste of money when even the smallest club's first priority is to get an escort boat for its racers, such as the new one the jokers of the Royal LONDON—Vivian Richards has given the West Indies a tremendous start in the 14th of the cricket test matches against England.

The 24-year-old batsman, who partnered with Roy Fredericks for 154 and then combined with Lawrence Rowe for a third-wicket partnership which added 191 runs, had 200 not out when play ended Thursday. It was his second double century of the series.

Last Lap In Arctic Hardest

POINT BARROW, Alaska (AP) — The Puget Sound-to-Prudhoe Bay sealift has only one lap to go, but it may be the toughest of them all.

Tugs and barges of the Arctic Marine Freighters sealift rounded the corner at Point Barrow Tuesday morning after an easy, 123-mile run from Icy Cape.

Point Barrow is 175 miles of water swirling with long stretches of ice.

With icebreaker assistance and plenty of luck, the flotilla of 13 tugs and 23 barges could reach Prudhoe very soon.

The race will be on to unload these barges, gather up the 26 barges left in Prudhoe Bay since last year's sealift and escape before the polar ice pack seals the port at Point Barrow for another year.

The flotilla is hauling 73,000 tons of North Slope oil field cargo.

Compared to last year, conditions so far have been a picnic, said Seattle Times reporter Stanton Patty, who is on the tug Warrior.

There have been costly delays and damage, but a year ago at this time, the fleet was a long way from Point Barrow. It was Sept. 4 before the first tugs and barges struggled into Prudhoe. The job was not completed until Oct.

While the crew prepares for the last leg of the trek, it agrees the waiting is harder to bear than the cold and loneliness.

Men slip into long periods of silence, staring into space or losing themselves in reading well-worn paperbacks and magazines, said Patty.

Even sleep comes hard — the tossing and turning, hoping sleep will help pass the time.

There is no room for exercise, no chance to take a walk on the beach.

The cook has exhausted his supply of fresh vegetables and milk, and menus are bound to grow more monotonous as stores diminish.

Three Cleared Of San Q Six

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (AP) — Three defendants in the murder-conspiracy trial of the San Quentin Six were acquitted of all charges Thursday. Another was convicted of murder and two others were convicted of lesser charges.

Found innocent of all charges stemming from a 1971 escape attempt at San Quentin Prison in which six persons died were Willie Tate, Electra Drumbo, and Luis Talamantez.

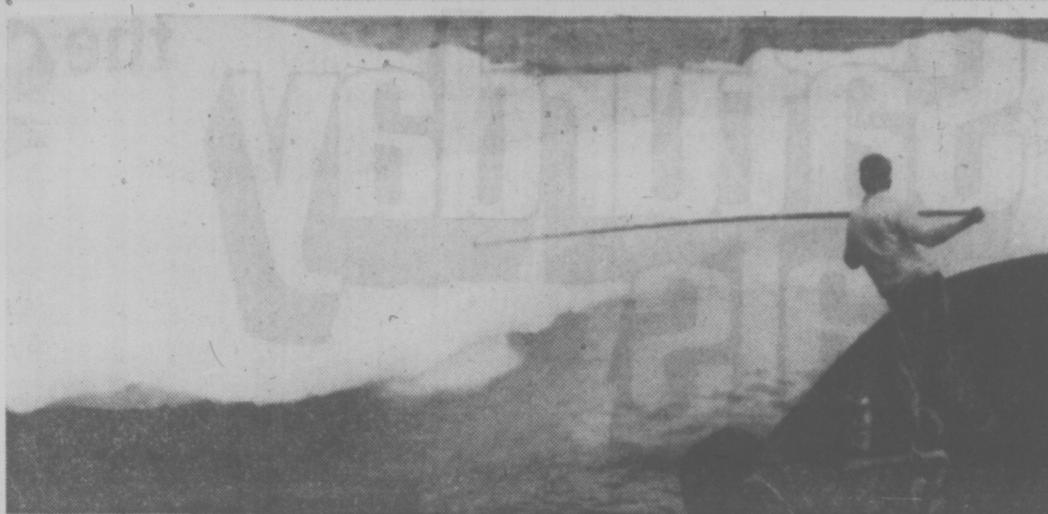

Johnnie L. Spain was convicted of the murders of two prison guards and of conspiring with black revolutionary George Jackson to escape. Jackson was slain in the escape attempts.

Convicted of assaulting prison guards were Hugo Pinell and David Johnson.

Tate, 30, the only defendant free on bail, raised both arms in clenched-fist salutes when the last of the verdicts was read. The verdicts were returned on the 24th day of jury deliberations.

The defendants, five of them current inmates at San Quentin, were accused of murder, assault and conspiracy in the bloody Aug. 21, 1971, confrontation at the prison. The bodies of three guards and two inmates were found in Jackson's cell in the prison's maximum security unit.

The verdict by the seven-man, five-man jury brought to an end the longest criminal trial in California history. Testimony began on July 28, 1975, after jury selection that took 17 weeks. The

Republican Liberals Losers

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — If the Republican party still has a liberal wing, someone must have forgotten to tell it the party platform would be written this week in Kansas City.

One of the few liberals on the 106-member platform committee, Clifford Groth of Alaska, watched the committee take the conservative position Thursday night on issue after issue.

Sitting literally and figuratively in the rear of the committee, he commented:

"From my position here in the back of the bus, it looks as if I'm participating in the dismemberment of the Republican party."

The party has not been dismembered during a week of platform hearings and drafting, but liberals certainly have less breathing space.

Of the handful of liberals on the committee, some were tolerated — such as the popular pipe-smoking Rep. Millie Fenwick of New Jersey.

Others were attacked before they opened their mouths, like Rep. John Anderson of Illinois who almost lost a subcommittee chairmanship 7-6 although no specific charge was made against him.

The only liberal stand taken by the committee so far is a 51-47 endorsement of the equal rights amendment, following a massive lobbying effort by feminists and Ford aides. The liberal tide lasted only minutes, however, as the committee overwhelmingly endorsed a constitutional amendment to ban abortion.

The light of publicity during the week was on the battle between President Ford, who wanted the platform written to conform to his basically conservative policies, and Ronald Reagan, who wanted it written to even more conservative specifications which might embarrass the president.

More than a dozen high Ford aides and trusted congressmen held a leash on the committee and its subcommittees.

Alyeska Checks Inadequate

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. interior department has rejected as inadequate the Alaska oil pipeline company's plan for checking on the reliability of hundreds of welds in the 800-mile line.

The plan offered by the Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. is either "incomplete or silent" in at least three ways proposed for detecting which of the welds are faulty, Undersecretary D. Kent Frizzell told the company in a letter.

His letter was released at a news conference Thursday in which Secretary Thomas S. Kleppe acknowledged that the welding problems could mean a delay in completing the pipeline, which is to carry oil from Alaska's North Slope to a terminal on the Southern Coast. "Later events will determine whether a delay will occur," he said.

The pipeline was scheduled for completion in mid-1977.

The trouble lies in the company's inability to demonstrate that all of 3,955 problems have been repaired. About 1,300 still remain to be repaired, between 600 and 900 of them in critical areas such as underneath rivers or the permafrost, Kleppe said.

He reiterated the Department's promise that "Not one drop of oil will flow through the Alaska Pipeline until it has been thoroughly tested and we are assured of its integrity."

To smoke or not to smoke.

There's a good chance that lately you've been giving some thought to smoking.
Many people are.

The question is, what are you going to do about it?
If you've never smoked, or if you've quit smoking, we're not urging you to start. But if you're a smoker who's not ready to give up the enjoyment you get from smoking, we'd like to call your attention to Vantage.

Vantage gives you the taste you want. The unique Vantage filter, which is based on a new design concept, lets the full, rich flavor of Virginia tobaccos come through. Vantage gives you so much of what you want in a cigarette with a lot less of what you don't want.

And Vantage draws easily. You don't have to puff hard pulling the smoke through so that the joy of smoking is lost.

If all this makes sense to you, there's every reason to consider the new cigarette called Vantage.

Why not try a pack.

Warning: Health and Welfare Canada advises that danger to health increases with amount smoked — avoid inhaling. 11 mg. "tar," 0.8 mg. nicotine.

VANCOUVER (CP) — A top federal official Thursday rapped the chief spokesman for private pilots across Canada for criticizing government studies on "French in the Air" in Quebec.

The head of the Canadian Air Transportation Administration, Walter McLeish, called on Russ Beach, president of the Canadian Owners and Pilots Association, to stop making comments until he knows more about the subject.

The attack came as McLeish was addressing a general aviation conference preceding Canada's largest air show at nearby Abbotsford. The three-day flying program opens Friday.

McLeish rejected criticism by Beach that simulator studies now being conducted on use of French in air traffic communications were a "half-baked" idea.

He said the similar provides a scientific approach toward finding answers but that Beach knows nothing about it.

McLeish said he believes French can be used without any "degradation" of safety for pilots or passengers.

NELSON (CP) — Dr. Rowland Grant, Notre Dame University president, said Thursday that the British Columbia department of education will continue to finance the private university on a degree-granting basis.

"There's lots of work ahead, but I'm optimistic that we can provide a good solution for students in the interior," said Dr. Grant. "There will always be an institution providing degree programs in Nelson."

Dr. Grant, other NDU officials and officials from Selkirk College in nearby Castlegar, met Wednesday with Deputy Education Minister Walter Hardwick to gain confirmation of financial support for NDU.

The university and Selkirk College will be offering a full five-year program on a shared basis during the 1976-77 academic year.

'SAME AS S.O.B.s I THOUGHT I'D LEFT BEHIND'

Gaffney Goodbye Says It All

The University of Victoria's "think tank" closes Oct. 1, axed by the Social Credit government, but its director Dr. Mason Gaffney, isn't leaving without a shot at the people who hired and fired him.

Gaffney said today before he came to B.C. he viewed the province through rose colored glasses.

"Now I know they are just the same as the S.O.B.'s I thought I'd left behind."

The economic expert was lured to B.C. by NDP Resources Minister Bob Williams in early 1973 to run the government-created B.C. Institute for Economic Policy Analysis.

The Institute was to advise the NDP cabinet on economic policy and was to operate out of UVic.

"The NDP created it, the Socreds destroyed it, but it may have been just window-dressing anyway," Gaffney said.

Gaffney said the NDP was "always getting hell from the opposition" about not understanding economic policy. "They needed a few high priests around."

But as "high priest," Gaffney feels he was largely ignored after the Institute was established.

Gaffney called Williams a "Jekyll and Hyde".

"He telephoned and told me that he'd just created this $10 million institute for economic analysis and that I'd been named as the director," said Gaffney.

"I asked him: 'What does a socialist government want me for? I'm no socialist.'

"He (Williams) replied: 'Oh, don't worry. This isn't a socialist government. That's only a word anyway.'

Gaffney said either Williams' position on the Institute changed between the time Gaffney was hired and the time he actually started work, or "it was all just a big put on from the start."

Gaffney said that as an American he had a somewhat idealized vision of Canada, especially of the then-new NDP government in B.C.

"I thought they might be different. I guess that was stupid of me. I guess I found that NDP politicians in B.C. are just as changeable as politicians elsewhere."

Gaffney feels he had little immediate effect on any provincial policy.

He said he got in a few shots but "in terms of anything significant — no."

"But there's always hope."

He said the research done by the Institute is to be published this fall and may have some long-term impact on the province.

Gaffney said he didn't feel particularly bitter toward either Williams or the NDP, but "I tell you that I wouldn't deal with them again without an iron-clad contract."

The Institute was killed by a bill brought in by Socred Economic Development Minister Don Phillips, who said that if the Socreds needed any advice from a university professor on economic matters there were plenty of well-qualified Canadian professors who could do the job.

"Apparently three years of immersion in B.C. is not enough to cleanse one of defective birth," Gaffney said.

Gaffney feels he was caught partially between Williams and NDP leader Dave Barret.

"I only had one conversation with Barrett. It was at a party at Bob Williams' house just after I arrived in Victoria.

"(He (Barrett) walked up to me and said: 'Just stay out of my way.' Then he walked off."

Gaffney said he expected when he came to B.C. that the allocation of the provincial budget would be made on eco-

Reasons Grimmer Than Death Toll

By EYNNE GORDON
In Canada, 1012 people drowned last year.

That statistic is grim, but grimmer still are the reasons behind those deaths — people standing up in boats; a child left unattended and without a lifejacket on a dock or the deck of a boat; a youth leaving a capsized canoe; lifejackets worn backwards.

Most drownings could be avoided if people followed simple water safety and boating safety rules. In fact, it should be mandatory that those who operate boats, for example, should learn and be tested on safety aspects.

That's not the case today. Although boating is the number one cause of drownings, it's all too easy to obtain a permit to operate a boat, carelessness and ignorance; For that matter, a permit isn't even always required. But when it is, it's even easier to obtain than a driver's license.

Among those who would like to see stricter requirements before permits are granted is Paul Warren of the Red Cross Water Safety Branch. "I would like to see a mandatory course geared towards water and boating safety plus an examination of the skills required in boating, especially in emergency situations."

The number one safety rule for everyone when boating is to wear a lifejacket. Children should be required to wear life jackets whenever they are anywhere near the water. Small children have been known to drown in four inches of water. They have fallen face down while wading in shallow water and in a panic have been incapable of getting up again.

But wearing a lifejacket isn't enough by itself, it must be worn properly. If you're shrugging that one off as an "obvious" let me remind you of the tragic drowning of a father and his two teenagers earlier this summer in Lake Ontario. They died because their lifejackets were on backwards.

As a result, groups interested in water safety have suggested that instructions on how to wear the device should be mandatory on all lifejackets.

caveat emptor

Instructions printed on labels won't do the trick unless people who use lifejackets, especially children, are taught how to use them properly in emergencies.

Because of the distribution of body weight and tendency to panic, children are tough subjects to float safely. When children panic they tend to thrash about and attempt to "climb" out of the water. Such violent movements tend to nullify the effects of a lifejacket and while the lifejacket may keep them afloat, it may not necessarily keep them in a face-up position.

For this reason it's vital that parents realize that lifejackets are not a substitute for parental supervision.

Parents can take if one step further. Warren recommends family practice sessions in which children are taught how to put on lifejackets, test them in water and get accustomed to the feel of floating in water with a lifejacket on.

It's vital to remember that the slab or keyhole type lifejacket should never be worn on the back. If it is, it tends to turn the face of the person wearing it into the water... they are less likely to become a statistic.

NEXT WEEK: Buying and maintaining a lifejacket.

Tell Him Early

DEAR ABBY: I am 28, unmarried and have just had one breast removed (cancer).

"When I meet a man who is not aware of the surgery I've had, do you think I should tell him about it or not? I've discussed it with several people. My mother says, 'Don't tell him until you are engaged to marry him.'

My physician says, "Tell him as soon as you think he could become seriously interested in you."

My best friend says, "It is best to tell a man early in the friendship because it might make a difference in the way he feels about you, and it's unfair to hold it back."

I would like your opinion and the opinions of men who may have had some experience with this problem. Thank you. — HAVING DOUBTS.

DEAR HAVING: I vote with your physician. Readers?

DEAR ABBY: I wear a wig sometimes, but not all the time. I have this friend who, no matter who is present — men, women or strangers — will walk up to me, lift up my hair (or wig) and even tug on it and ask, "Is that a wig you're wearing? Is that your own hair?"

Abby, when she does that, I get terribly embarrassed. How can I tell her in a nice way, so I don't offend her, that whether I'm wearing a wig or not is nobody's business but my own? — WIG-WEARER.

DEAR WIG-WEARER: Tell her plain language. And if she embarrasses you in this manner again, give the same consideration to her as she gives to you. (Like practically none).

DEAR ABBY: I know you've had some pretty far-out problems in your life, but this one will surely "take the cake."

I am a 15-year-old boy, and to put it bluntly, I've fallen in love with one of my teachers. You may think that's normal for a kid my age, but the teacher happens to be a male, and he's a priest as well.

Although I've never considered myself completely gay, I know love when it happens, and believe me, this is love. I've even considered going into the priesthood just to have more in common with him, but I'm not sure I'd make a good priest.

When this teacher talks to me, I just clam up, so he probably thinks I'm just quiet, so we don't have the greatest relationship. I don't know many girls because this is an all-boy school, but I've dated some.

I know I need some kind of help, but don't suggest a school counselor. I could never face one. I know I'm all mixed up, but I'm not crazy. I keep thinking about this teacher night and day, and that's not normal. Please help me. — MIXED UP.

DEAR MIXED: You DO need help, and the best available near you is a school counselor. He's heard your story before (and so have I), so there's no reason to be ashamed. You must talk this out frankly with a professional. You may not even be gay (it could simply be a phase you're going through). Urge you to see a counselor.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding your advice to those squares in Illinois who refused to allow their divorced 20-year-old son to sleep with his girlfriend when they visited, but sent them off to a motel: Abby, your advice is Victorian.

We also have a divorced son, age 30. Because he is very much in love with a very sweet girl, whom we would be thrilled to have as our daughter-in-law, they sleep together whenever they visit us. Inasmuch as they live together in the city where they work, it would be rank hypocrisy for us to insist that they sleep apart in our home.

Abby, you and those Illinois parents are too concerned with appearances and what people will think! Why don't you either advance into the 20th century or retire? — SENSIBLE.

DEAR SENSIBLE: I'm "advanced" enough for most people, and have no intentions of retiring. I deny the charge that I am concerned only with appearances and what people will think. If no one knew it but myself, I still could not approve of my unmarried (though adult) children sleeping with their lovers in my home.

DEAR D.B.: For the benefit of those among us who don't speak Latin, you have a Peperomia which has dark-green, fleshy leaves. If you've checked it thoroughly for disease and found none, you probably are doing two things wrong — watering too much and feeding too much.

Peperomias do surprisingly well with only the tiniest amount of water, so wait for the soil to dry out about an inch down before you water. You are also feeding too much; this plant needs nothing more than a little bit of organic food (such as fish emulsion) about once every two months during the growing season (spring through summer). It isn't uncommon for this plant to lose its lower leaves and grow rather tall and stately, so if you follow the above-mentioned basic rules and keep your plant in good light, it should pull through. We're rooting for you

When Life Gets Too Sticky Try Greasing the Skids

The Formula

By NORMAN H. STARK
Of life's little annoyances, one that tops my list is things that stick when they're not supposed to. A drawer that resists being pulled open, a window that won't go up or down as it was made to do, the car door that squeaks when it's closed, the key that has to be forcibly pushed into and pulled out of the lock, are just a few examples. The cause? Friction. The antidote? Lubrication.

There are many different types of lubricants such as oils, greases, silicones, waxes and graphite. For the problems mentioned, I prefer lubricating sticks because of the low cost and ease of application. You can make them easily and inexpensively. Here's the formula.

Before you begin, you need to make up some paper tubes for molds. I find a convenient size to be about three-eighths inch in diameter and four inches long. These can be rolled away from ordinary wrapping paper and tied or taped around the circumference to hold the paper in place. One end of the tube must be taped or stapled closed.

Measure out one-half cup PETROLATUM (Vaseline or equivalent) and one-half cup PARAFFIN WAX. Put both ingredients in the top of a double-boiler (never over direct heat) and warm until melted. Mix and allow to cool to just above the solidification point. Pour into paper tubes and let stand until solid. To use, peel off paper from closed end and apply lubricant, with rubbing action, to surface where friction is to be reduced.

Once again the fascinating study of interior decorating will be introduced to you by theoretical and practical analysis. These lectures will be held in the store and also supplemented by on location studies in selected homes including a visit to the residence of Mr. Egoian to discuss the problems arising in furniture arrangement, color schemes, lighting, styles, theme, drapery and carpet selection, and proper use of pictures and accessories.

Mr. Joseph Egoian, B.A. ED., your instructor, is well qualified with extensive theoretical and practical knowledge. He is a graduate from the Art Institute of Chicago and the California College of Arts and Crafts; has taught at Oakland Tech, High Calif., the American College in Cairo and the Evening Adult Education program in Victoria. In addition, he has a wealth of practical experience in retail field as proprietor of Ego Arts Gallery in Cairo for five years, and Ego Interiors in Victoria for fourteen years. Mr. Egoian is a qualified artist and has exhibited his art works in a number of one-man shows in the U.S.A. and U.S.A. He won first prize in Vancouver Island Jury Show at the Art Gallery of Victoria, also a one-man show theme "BIRDS" was displayed at Burnaby Art Gallery and is now at Ego Interiors.

For the past eleven years this course in interior decorating has been given by Mr. Egoian twice yearly in three separate classes each week. At an average of twenty students in each class, almost a thousand students have taken the course to date.

THE CLASSES WILL BE HELD TUESDAY AFTERNOONS FROM 1 TO 2:30 P.M. AND ALSO EVENINGS ON MONDAY OR WEDNESDAY, 7:30 TO 9 P.M.

CLASSES START SEPT. 27th, 28th or 29th AT EGO INTERIORS. TOTAL COST OF SIX LECTURES ONCE A WEEK. $20.00.

Free for the Pickin' Right in Your Own Back Yard

It's not necessary to take to the back woods to start reaping nature's bountiful harvest of volunteer vegetables. Chances are, your back yard, lawn or garden is well stocked with these free edibles too.

In many cases, garden weeds that you think of as ordinary pests are really no work, natural, free-for-the-pickin' food.

Weed-stalking can be as enjoyable as it is economical if you remember two cardinal rules: (A) Positively identify your plants and (B) Gather your foliage in a safe place.

Don't ever put a plant to your lips or tongue until you've positively identified—and determined the edibility of the weed in question with the aid of a guidebook or an experienced forager.

It's best to take the plant to your county agricultural agent for positive identification. General rules of thumb (regarding color, shape, milky sap, etc.) should not be depended on to determine a plant's edibility or non-edibility.

Where you gather your foliage is also very important. Don't pick wild food from areas that might have been sprayed with herbicides, pesticides or chemicals not meant for use on edible vegetables. (Always wash whatever you eat before you eat it!)

It's also impressive to forage too close to roadways—lead from auto exhausts may have contaminated the soil to a dangerous extent.

Maintain a 25-foot separation between plant and highway as a bare minimum, and try—if possible—for 50 to 100 feet of separation.

Similarly, don't forage in areas which are likely to contain pollution... such as near factories, chemical dumping grounds, or effluent-tainted waterways.

Three of the most common wild foods that can be found as close as your garden are lamb's-quarters (Chenopodium album), sheep sorrel (Rumex acetosella) and wood sorrel (Oxalis acetosella) and other species.

Lamb's-quarters—also known as pigweed, goosefoot and wild spinach—is a relative of spinach and is one of the most widely distributed plants on earth. Both Europeans and American Indians cultivated this leafy annual for its abundant yield of seeds (seeds which—incidentally—contain an average of 16 per cent protein, compared to wheat's 14 per cent).

Mature lamb's-quarters stands two to seven feet tall and can be identified by its jagged-edged, diamond-shaped leaves which—on their undersides—are powdered with coarse, whitish particles. The short leafstalks may either be reddish-streaked or plain green. (Both the stem and leaves of young plants are usually just mealily white.)

Lamb's-quarters is surprisingly nutritious. The uncooked plant happens to be richer in iron, protein and vitamin B2 than either raw cabbage or raw spinach.

While only the tender growing tips of mature lamb's-quarters are mild enough to eat, every part of the plant from the ground up is tasty when taken from lamb's-

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

One of the oldest deceptive chestnuts in bridge is contained in today's deal. But, based on what happened, it never occurred to South to employ it. The consequence of his error of omission was that he incurred a one-trick set — which might well have been the result even if South played correctly. However, South never even gave himself a fighting chance.

Opening lead: King of ♡.

After his heart king had captured the opening lead, with dummy following suit with the three, East with the deuce, and South with the heart four, West paused for a moment. From East's play of the deuce (the lowest of the low), West knew that East had no interest in having hearts continued. But, in view of dummy's solid diamond suit, West felt that if he didn't play his heart ace at trick two, it might be uncatchable later (he was right). So he next led the heart ace, telling South's queen.

As is evident, with East being the possessor of both the queen and ace of trumps in back of the board's king, declarer had to lose two trump tricks and incur a one-trick defeat. As is equally obvious, if the defenders played correctly (with West cashing two heart tricks), South would be doomed to defeat. But South did have an opportunity to alter his destiny — and it is conceivable that he could have done so.

Suppose that on the opening lead of the heart king South had falsecarded with the queen (instead of following suit with his lowest heart, the four-spot). Is it not possible that West would have accepted South's play at face value: that the queen was a singleton? And might it not have devolved that at trick two West would have shifted to a club?

As is obvious, if West didn't cash the heart ace at trick two, South, before touching trumps, would have cashed two of dummy's diamonds, discarding his remaining heart on the second diamond lead. So let's charge declarer with an error of omission for not falsecarding with the heart queen.

SOLUTION MONDAY

LITTLE PEOPLE'S PUZZLE

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Saturday, August 14

By SYDNEY OMAR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You get chance to extricate yourself from "intolerable situation." Key is to be aware of rights, to hone in on aspirations, to let it be known that you are not without allies. Contract could be spotlighted and come up for renegotiation. Leo, Aquarius persons could play key roles.

TAURUS (April 20-May 19): One who counsels you on finances, investments is actually concerned. Know it and respond accordingly. Secrets come tumbling forth — be sophisticated without being cynical. Message will be clear as day progresses. Follow through on hunch. Individual who aided you in past will come back into picture. Don't permit pride to block progress.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Social life accelerates. Your sense of curiosity could "save the day." Put out feelers — ask questions, investigate, permit questions to flow forth. You'll get answers, some of them surprising. A Sagittarian could figure prominently.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your strength is tested. Your convictions may be on the line. Practice restraint. Don't challenge one who is better equipped than you. Emphasis on career, ambition, community representation, ability to accept responsibility and exercise authority.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Now you find reasons for recent happenings — puzzle pieces fall into place. Accent on relatives, distance, communication, change of itinerary. Restless persons seem to surround you. Take it in stride. Be aware though to "take notes."

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Spotlight on costs, options, decisions regarding family-vacation matters, including purchase of luxury products. Taurus, Libra might be involved. Count your change. Check references. Be positive concerning guarantees, quality.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You attempt to gain overall picture or impression. You may be anticipating, taking too much for granted, even though you don't realize it. Status quo is shuffled, shaken and put out to dry. Revisions are in order. Know it and start streamlining!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): This is "power time." What was contained or confined bursts out all over. Not good for attempting to keep secrets. Fine for organizing, bringing priorities into focus. Older, cantankerous individual has something to say. Listen and learn — without being intimidated.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Lover's quarrel should not be taken too seriously. Excitement and impulsive actions tend to dominate. Give logic some time, too!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be an innovator. Refuse to have terms, methods dictated. You are a right to your opinions and procedures. Know it and act like you know it. Leo, Aquarius could be in picture. One in position of authority may not be resting easily. Air of sudden change prevails — upset is much a possibility.

ARQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A "teacher" is in picture and will have much to do with your decisions, actions. Another Aquarian might play prominent role. Trips, messages, calls, social activity may all be on your crowded agenda.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Refuse to be discouraged by apparent overwhelming costs. You are due for financial "good news." Know it and be more optimistic. Long face or complaints only tend to chase those who really are concerned about your welfare.

WIZARD OF ID (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): "Your opponent demands equal time on the balcony" ... "And so we should put an end to tyrannical suppression" ... "I still have three minutes!" ... "Use them to pray."

APARTMENT 3-G (Aug. 14-Sept. 12): Please, promise me one thing, Angela... don't tell Frank I came here tonight! ... I've never been in love until I met Frank! To me, he's the most wonderful person I've ever met. ... Some time I ain't so sure! ... Is woman's name Janice Brooks?

NANCY (Aug. 14-Sept. 12): Rollo bought me two nice birch trees ... Next day ... Here's a couple of oak trees for ya.

MARK TRAIL (Aug. 14-Sept. 12): Lookahere, Mary, did you know the ranger is a Bible-readin' man? ... Certainly! ... Ed Red.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): "Oh, no. You do some figuring now." Her husband chuckled. "But I will tell you they differ by 196." You try.

PACIFIC PRESS TALKS CONTINUE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Representatives of the joint council of newspaper unions and Pacific Press Ltd. were to meet today in an attempt to resolve a pay dispute which has shut down the city's two daily newspapers.

Representatives from the company, which publishes the Province and the Sun, and the joint council, which covers seven newspaper editions, were to discuss a ruling by the British Columbia Labor Relations Board that the company was justified in delaying payment of full wage increases.

Pacific Press general manager Dave Stinson had announced about 20 days ago that the company wouldn't pay full wage increases as laid out in a contract ratified by both sides less than a month ago until the Anti-Inflation Board had ruled on the validity of the contract.

The company has agreed to pay the guideline increase of 8.3 per cent and bank the rest.

That move precipitated a slowdown by employees at both newspapers which delayed publication for several hours on some editions and forced cancellation of others.

Finally, the company suspended publication Aug. 7 and neither paper has published since that date.

Dave McIntyre head of the joint council, said no union members would return to their jobs until after today's meeting, when certain parts of the ruling would be clarified.

By the time the world's greatest detectives figure out whodunit...you could die laughing!

Happiness Is Finding a Real Father . . .

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — North America's best-selling poet has succeeded in his lifelong search for his father. This week Ron McKuen returned to his birthplace in celebration. Born out of wedlock in 1932 at the Salvation Army hospital in Oakland, Calif., and a ramble throughout the Western states after he ran away from his mother and stepfather at age 11, McKuen always nursed an obsessive desire — to find the identity of his real father.

"Every day of the year I've thought about my father, wondered if he were tall or short, intelligent or a man of common sense, beautiful to look at or plain, a criminal or a barrister, a teacher or a but a universal search we all have to find something — a desire for identity," said McKuen, who decided to publish a book on the subject he believes is so important.

The poet with the soft, sad eyes even put on a rare autograph party for the book. Finding My Father, his first lengthy prose work about the ups and downs of his life, right up to the present.

"It's not an autobiography," McKuen said. "I did the book so no kid would have to go through what I went through — having the term illegitimate tacked on them."

Although he found a certain peace of mind — and a few new relatives — from tracing his roots, McKuen also discovered that the task was.

Now he'd like to help open the doors for others who want to trace their parentage.

"It's not only my search, but a universal search we all have to find something — a desire for identity," said McKuen, who decided to publish a book on the subject he believes is so important.

And although he and his father's names were spelled slightly different, McKuen isn't sad that the man who was married, whisked his wife in and out of his mother's life.

"My mother really named me after my father," he reflected, "so she must have loved him a lot."

McKuen himself bore a son out of wedlock but is good friends with him and the boy's mother, who later married.

In addition to his books of poetry, which have sold more than 16 million copies in hardcover. McKuen, a former rock-and-roll singer, is the composer of 1,500 songs, recently completed an opera and lectures widely.

He says he'll search for more details about his father's life, but must now concentrate on a new film he's to direct and a ballooning movie he's starring in. Ron McKuen — Flying Free.

Trial for Diamond

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Singer Neil Diamond pleaded innocent Thursday to a misdemeanor charge of marijuana possession and faces trial Sept. 27. Attorney Brian O'Neill entered the plea in municipal court for the singer, who was not present. Diamond was cited by sheriff's deputies June 30 after a three-hour search of his Bel Air home that reportedly turned up about one ounce of the drug.

Bluebeard Tag for French Mass Killer

PARIS — A 53-year-old French house-painter who served 20 years in prison for budgeoning and slashing a man to death has been charged with five more killings. There is speculation the murder toll may mount and newspapers already are comparing him with the notorious mass-murderer, Bluebeard, Bernard Pesquet, was charged with two new counts of murder Thursday after identifying badly-decomposed bodies dug up in his cellar as those of his 33-year-old wife, Christiane, who disappeared two years ago, and Henri Franquel, 62, a businessman who may have been her lover.

VACAVILLE, Calif. — Democratic presidential candidate Jimmy Carter's nephew says he fears for his life and wants to be transferred from the state prison where he suffered superficial stab wounds. Prison officials said Thursday they were uncertain whether William Carter Spaine, 29, was attacked or inflicted the wounds himself. Spaine is serving 10 years for two armed robberies.

WASHINGTON — NBC will audition another woman on the Today Show Aug. 23-24 to see if she would make a suitable on-the-air companion for Tom Brokaw when he takes over as host at the end of August. Her name is Kelly Lange and she works for KNCB, the NBC owned and operated station in Los Angeles where she does news, weather and personalities reports on the local news show.

A Language That' All Their Own

WASHINGTON — He's in the big house for all day and night, a new fish jammed into a drum with a cribman who's acting like a kazoo. It's gonna be a long, long time before he beats the bokkes back to his main lady.

If those words sound strange to you, it's probably because you've never been in jail.

A new dictionary of prison argot says this is the translation: He's in the federal penitentiary for a life sentence, a new prisoner jammed into a cell with a safecracker who's acting like a passive homosexual. It's going to be a long, long time before he gets out of prison on parole to go back to his wife.

The slang terms commonly used in prisons "trace fear and frustration, cynicism and desperation," write John Armore and Joseph Wolfe, editors of the Dictionary of Desperation.

Sources for the slang terms were convicts, prison volunteer workers, social workers and journalists.

Sea Buses Christened

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

The provincial government's two new sea-going buses — the commuter ferries for the Burrard Inlet crossing in Vancouver — were christened Thursday at Yaquina Ltd. here.

The bright orange 112-foot ships — the Burrard Beaver and the Burrard Otter — were christened by Audrey Bennett, wife of Premier Bill Bennett, and Sheila Curtis, wife of Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis, the minister responsible for the commuter ferries.

The ferries will not likely be in service until next February after the completion of the floating terminals at the CPR.

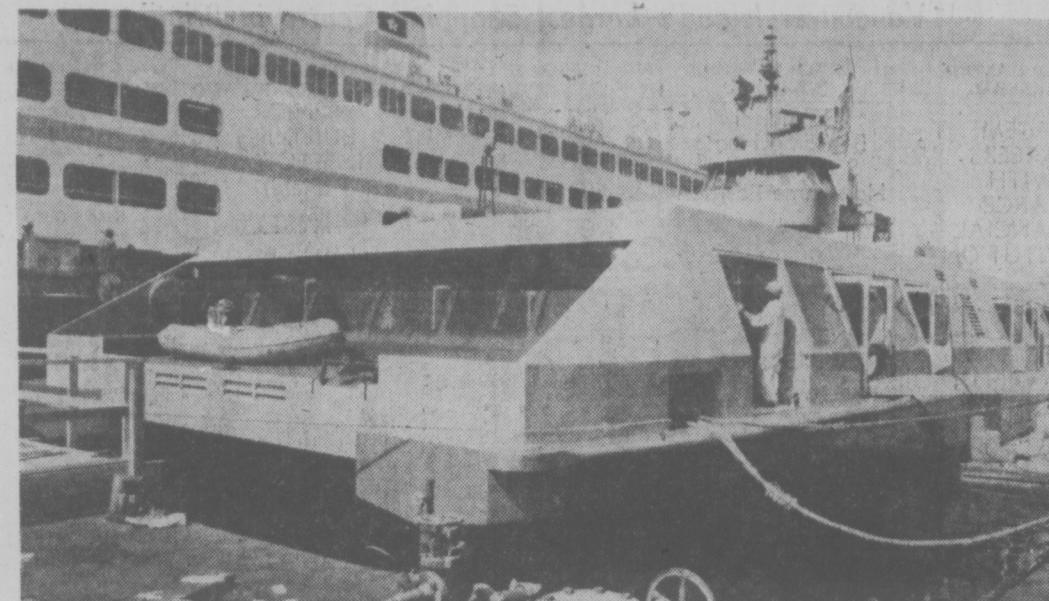

dock on the Vancouver side and at the foot of Lonsdale Ave. in North Vancouver.

Total cost of the ferries and the terminals is expected to be about $35 million and Curtis said Thursday he hopes they will become popular with commuters as a "kiss-and-ride" method of getting to and from work.

"Kiss and ride," Curtis explained, involves a husband or wife driving the spouse to the ferry terminal in the morning and then picking them up in the evening.

The impressive, catamaran-hulled ships hold 400 passengers and can make the North Vancouver-Vancouver crossing in 10 minutes.

The fares will be linked

Workmen at Yaquina put finishing touches on sea-going bus with the B.C. Hydro bus service in Vancouver, Curtis said, but details haven't been worked out.

The ships are Canadian to the core. They were designed by Case Existological Laboratories in Victoria and all machinery and fittings are Canadian, mostly British Columbian.

The ships will be staffed by a crew of four and are built to withstand knocks, bumps, logs, waves and just about anything else Vancouver harbor can throw at them, John Case said.

"It is the safest ferry system of its type in the world," he said.

He stopped short of saying they are unsinkable: "The last two ships that made that claim didn't make their maiden voyage."

The ferries are expected to operate between 6 a.m. and 2 p.m. and at peak periods will cruise at 13.5 knots and leave every 10 minutes.

Case said the loading and unloading time of the ferries is minimal. Oncoming passengers flow in from one side of the lounge and outgoing passengers file out the other.

Case used a group of school children and set up a facsimile of the ship in a school gymnasium. It took only 30 seconds to load and unload, but because most commuters don't move as quickly as school children, he estimates it will take about 45 seconds.

Curtis said the ships were a "remarkably efficient method of transporting people ... without further clogging up the streets with automobiles."

BUILDING DIPS IN SAANICH

Building in Saanich during July plummeted to less than half the same period last year because of the recent industry dispute.

Ninety-four building permits were issued for a total value of $1,746,415, compared to 184 permits valued at $5,562,912 in July, 1975.

A total of 28 permits for single-family homes and duplexes was issued for a total value of $1,336,610. In the same period in 1975 89 permits, valued at $3,110,800 were taken out.

The amount of construction for the first seven months of 1976, however, continues to surpass that carried out in the same period of 1975.

A total of 887 permits was issued, valued at $37,573,211, compared to 756 permits, valued at $29,428,335.

There were 441 permits with a value of $16,769,085 for single-family homes and duplexes. In the same period of 1975 there were 459 permits taken out for a total value of $15,752,800.

Apartment construction is up, however, this year. Permits for 762 units were issued compared to 579 in 1975.

Blood donor clinics will be held daily next week in Greater Victoria and Red Cross spokesman Gerry Savage hopes there will be some new faces.

An estimated 35 per cent of Canadians are eligible donors but it's known that less than five per cent keep donating all the blood used in hospitals, he notes.

Savage says most people assume they have a right to blood transfusions if they are hurt in an accident. But blood doesn't come with Medicare or hospital insurance and there's no laboratory manufaturing it — it has to be donated.

Monday's clinic next week is at Red Cross House, 1046 Port, from 2:30 p.m. to 8 p.m.

On Tuesday the clinic is at the Esquimalt Recreation Centre, 527 Fraser St., from 2 to 8 p.m. Victoria Press Ltd., 2621 Douglas, is the site for Wednesday's clinic from 2 to 8 p.m.

MOORHEAD WAITING

VANCOUVER (CP) — Quarterback Don Moorhead is ready to return to British Columbia Lions, but the Western Football Conference team doesn't appear interested in the five-year veteran.

Moorhead, 26, said Thursday in a telephone interview from his home at Kalamazoo, Mich., that he is working out daily with the hope "someone calls me."

The Lions, who spent five years and an estimated $175,000 in training Moorhead for the position, apparently have adopted the stance that they will swim or sink this season with less-experienced quarterbacks.

Coach Cal Murphy said he wasn't interested in bringing Moorhead back, although the team was going to look at quarterbacks Randy Mattingly, already cut by Saskatchewan Roughriders and Hamilton Tiger-cats this season.

Manager Man For the Job

By The Associated Press

The situation Thursday night called for a clutch hitter and manager Frank Robinson of Cleveland Indians knew just the man for the job.

"It was a tough situation but I knew the pressure wasn't going to bother me," Robinson explained. "I was the man for the situation."

Robinson sent himself up as a pinch-hitter with one out, the bases loaded and the score tied in the bottom of the ninth inning of an American League baseball game between the Indians and Texas Rangers.

He made himself look good with a line single to give the Indians a 5-4 victory over the Rangers.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Dec. 17 was set aside Thursday in Victoria provincial court by Judge William Ostler for preliminary hearing of a Sooke RCMP charge of theft of an explosives magazine and its contents.

Sooke resident Gary Adcock, 31, of West Coast Road, was charged with stealing the magazine and contents between Oct. 16 and Nov. 27, 1974, in the Jordan River area.

Defence lawyer Harold Turnham, who said Dermot Owen-Flood would represent Adcock at the hearing, entered a choice of trial by judge and jury. Adcock was summonsed to face the charge and will remain free on that summons until the hearing.

Sooke RCMP said late in 1974 a 350-pound steel magazine 38 inches by 42 inches, and 20 inches high, had disappeared from Armside Mining Co. property near Jordan River and 700 pounds of dynamite were inside. They valued the explosives at $1,000 and the magazine at $300.

Ostler approved release on own-recognition "ball" of $3,000 for David Michael Henderson, 22, of 4219 Carey, on a Victoria charge of possession of 10 $20 bills known to have been obtained by uttering forged documents.

Another judge had refused bail May 6 in the case and the trial had been set for Thursday but the prosecution needed time to get witnesses. The trial now is set for Sept. 10.

William Harold Mack, 28, won Ostler's consent for a transfer to Burnaby court of a charge of uttering the documents involved in Henderson's case. Defence lawyer Dean Wilson indicated a guilty plea was possible when Mack appears in Burnaby. Mack is also facing a Burnaby charge of a bank holdup April 23.

Two recent arrivals in Victoria, Laszlo James Mag and Ross Albert McLeod, both 17 and staying with friends at 8 Alma Place, were remanded in custody by Ostler to Sept. 3 for pre-sentence reports and sentence.

Mag and McLeod pleaded guilty to a joint charge of stealing a $1,000 outboard motorboat early Thursday and of a break-in and theft a few hours later at the Oak Bay Kiwanis Pavilion at Willows Park.

They drove the boat direct from its place in the Inner Harbor to Oak Bay and planned to return it before dawn. Their schedule was thrown out of kilter because they had to wait almost two hours before breaking into the pavilion. They were waiting a couple on the beach near the pavilion to go home, which they did about 4 a.m.

Bryant Terrene Fogarty, 26, of Maple Ridge, B.C., was charged with possession of heroin Wednesday in Victoria for the purpose of trafficking.

Ostler remanded the case for one week at the request of Legal Aid duty counsel Barry Mah Ming, who said Fogarty wanted to get a lawyer and also wanted to see a doctor about "medical problems." Bail will not be considered until the next appearance.

Steven Sorenson, 26, was sentenced by Ostler to an extra four months in jail following a plea of guilty to a Victoria charge of false pretences in using a worthless cheque July 29 to get $45 cash from a Victoria business. Ostler noted Sorenson is committing a total of 3½ years for similar offences in 1973 and 1975 and has been released twice on mandatory-supervision paroles but both have been forfeited. The new term will extend Sorenson's release date to about May 1, 1977.

Two persons facing separate drink-drive charges were found guilty after their trials and sentenced to terms in jail.

Glen Ernest Pearson, 41, of

Two Ferry Systems Defended

Transport Minister Jack Davis disagreed Thursday with a suggestion by Conservative Leader Scott Wallace that one department should take care of all ferry needs in Victoria and earlier this month said the transport ministry and the highways department finance their ferries.

The Conservative leader said there are many small ferries in the interior operated by the highways department, and people using them don't have to pay.

Davis said if a person is living in a remote community with little traffic and few people, there is a case for a free ferry.

Davis also said that in some cases, it would not be financially worthwhile to set up a toll booth to collect money.

Fanny Bay, was jailed for 30 days by Judge Blake Allan for impaired driving April 20 in the Colwood area. Cameron Kreger, 24, of 2605 Killarney, was sentenced by Judge Harold Alder to a 14-day intermittent term for refusing to take a breath-analysis test April 21 in Victoria.

Linda Darnall Warawa, 25, of 844 Seymour, was sentenced by Ostler to 30 days in jail. She was found guilty after a trial on a Victoria charge of stealing a $16.95 man's hat June 1 from the T. Eaton Co. and had a record of similar offences.

In traffic court, two persons who pleaded guilty to separate charges of driving with a blood-alcohol reading above .08 per cent were fined $450 each by Judge Allan. They were Colleen Black, 18, of 2182 Amelia, stopped July 10 in Sidney, and Thomas Parsons, 20, Work Point Bartrucks, June 12 in Esquimalt.

Cornelius Quiring, 57, of 1233 Fairfield, pleaded guilty to a Sidney charge of impaired driving July 25 and was fined $50 and ordered to do 25 hours of community-service work.

A 31-year-old Victoria man who was assisted by police Wednesday evening after receiving a minor stab wound was arrested two hours later on a weapons charge read Thursday in Victoria provincial court.

A second part of the report said Ronald Paul Garfield Cooper, 2319 Wark, was seen about 8:28 p.m. Wednesday walking in the 2500 block Wark and suffering from a chest wound.

The report said police determined Cooper had a small knife wound in his upper right chest. He was taken to Victoria General Hospital but refused treatment and walked out. The report said Cooper told police he had been in a fight but refused to give any other details.

A Victoria police report said

Cooper was arrested about 10:35 p.m. in another part of Victoria.

In court Thursday, Cooper was charged with possession of a knife for a purpose dangerous to the public peace and prosecutor Robert Mulligan said police had seized a knife with an eight-inch blade.

At the request of Legal Aid duty counsel Barry Mah

Ming, Ostler adjourned the case for one week. Cooper was released on an understanding to return.

Coal Miners Back on Job

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP)

Thousands of Appalachian coal miners began returning to work Thursday in the first major break in a wildcat strike that the industry says cost the nation over $130 million in lost production.

Mines across northern West Virginia were in operation for the first time in four weeks.

Officials said the back-to-work movement included miners in six other states.

3 More Show Lassa Signs

Times News Services

TORONTO — Three persons who were aboard a trans-Atlantic flight with a woman suspected of having deadly Lassa fever have shown symptoms of the rare African disease, a Toronto health official said today.

Dr. William Frank, director of the communicable disease centre for the Toronto Public Health Service, said his office has been contacted by "three people who have got symptoms of some sort."

He said all were on the same flight as a St. Catharines, Ont., woman who is in hospital with a probable first-ever case of the disease in Canada.

Dr. Frank declined to identify the three persons but said all were residents of Metropolitan Toronto.

He said all have been advised to contact their doctors and stay at home. He said tests were being conducted on the three, but that no immediate plans had been made to forward the results to the centre for disease control in Atlanta.

The Ontario health ministry has ordered Etobicoke General Hospital in Toronto to stop admitting patients.

Olga Kamckey, 56, of St. Catharines, Ont., was admitted to the hospital Aug. 2 after she collapsed at Toronto International Airport following a flight from London.

Ontario Health Minister Frank Miller said Thursday the ministry's move in closing the hospital and subsequent surveillance of all known contacts was unprecedented in the province's history.

Dr. Alan Krueger, acting chief of staff at the hospital, said Thursday that Mrs. Kamckey, still in critical condition but was showing encouraging improvement.

Miller said it will not be known until early next week whether the woman is suffering from the disease, which kills between 30 and 50 per cent of persons who get it.

CLC Protest Oct. 14

OTTAWA (UPI) — Mass meetings and picket lines are planned as the anchors of labor's national day of protest against wage controls which the Canadian Labor Congress announced Thursday would be held Oct. 14.

The date falls on the first anniversary of the wage and price controls program introduced by Prime Minister Trudeau as a means to fight inflation.

The day of the protest along with sketchy plans of action were announced by CLC President Joe Morris at a news conference after a meeting of CLC executives and representatives of 110 affiliated unions.

He said that a nation-wide network of key union personnel had been set up to organize the day of protest which the CLC is refraining from calling a general strike.

The CLC has opposed wage controls from the start saying it penalizes workers unfairly while doing little to control price increases.

cluding rumored layoffs in September.

Thornber said although his own mind is not completely at rest on the matter, his union was assured by general manager Charles Gallagher there would be no further layoffs in September.

If there are cutbacks there'll be one strike this province will never forget and we wouldn't talk about it first," he said.

He said the unlicensed personnel would respect a strike if the officers up up picket lines.

Peter Marshall, staff representative serving the 750-strong licensed division, said no picket lines would appear at ferry terminals so unlicensed personnel will be able to report for work and presumably receive pay.

Marshall has said strike action — which still has to be approved by the membership — would halt ferry sailings.

But there is some speculation some vessels would still sail.

If even a small group of ships officers ignored the executive's strike call, and turned up at the terminals staggered sailings could still be scheduled, scuttling the effect of the strike.

Marshall said the officers' executive decided on strike action because they are worried lay-offs will come when the Tsawwassen-Swartz Bay run is cut back after Labor Day.

There are five vessels on the run now and two will be taken off.

"What's going to happen to the crews of those vessels? No one will say," said Marshall.

But Thornber said Gallagher pledged there would be no further cutbacks other than 200 implemented in June as a means of reducing the fleet's deficit.

Marshall's other concern is wage negotiations.

Thornber shares the concern.

The provincial government, he said, called together all the components of the B.C. Government Employees' Union, which represents the ferry workers, and offered a $45 a month wage increase effective Oct. 1, 1976.

"Our contract expired Sept. 30, 1975, but we would go a year with no wage increase," under that proposal, said Thornber.

Safeway Lockout

The first move in a labor dispute which could see 93 chain stores shut down next week came Thursday when 600 employees at the Safeway warehouse in Vancouver were locked out.

About 80 employees at the Victoria warehouse faced lockout action today along with the warehouse in Dawson Creek, as well as a Lucerne Foods Ltd. and Empress Foods Ltd. plants.

A company spokesman said retail outlets will remain open, despite a halt in shipping, as long as supplies last.

Main issue in the dispute is not wages, but changes to the pension plan, grievance procedures and declaration of not goods.

NEWS BRIEFS

U.S. Prices Jump

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The biggest jump in U.S. industrial prices since January occurred last month, the labor department reported Thursday. Government economists saw no cause for alarm. The July advance translated into an annual inflation rate of 3.6 per cent. Wholesale food prices dropped 1 per cent in July.

Killer Twister Hits

LARGO, Fla. (UPI) — One person was killed, 12 others injured and 110 mobile homes damaged by two twisters that struck Thursday night on Florida's gulf coast between Largo and St. Petersburg.

Inflation Slows

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain's annual inflation rate has dropped to 12.9 per cent, its lowest level in 2½ years, the employment department announced today. The annual rate has fallen for 11 consecutive months. It stood at 26.8 per cent last August.

'Poison' Abortions

MILAN (Reuter) — Three young women from the poison-affected area of Seveso were given abortions today despite strong Vatican opposition, a hospital spokesman said. The women are in their early 20s and come from Seveso where the highly toxic chemical dioxin polluted the area following an explosion at a Swiss-owned factory July 10.

CAPETOWN — Gunfire was heard in a related development, Radio Mozambique said today that 618 people died in last Sunday's strike by Rhodesian forces inside Mozambique.

Breaking its four-day silence on the raid, the radio said the Rhodesians attacked the village of Nhagomia, where it says thousands of refugees were concentrated.

The official said the master of the ship reported that 24 Chinese crew members aboard were on the bridge, French said, "but the master reportedly feared for their safety, as well as his own."

French said the ship was located about 30 miles off San Diego.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A MacMillan-Bloedel bulk carrier has been escorted into port here after her master reported a possible mutiny aboard, a U.S. Coast Guard said today.

The J. V. Clyne, a 593-foot vessel was at anchor off Coronado Island for the night, said Lieut. Arthur French of the coast guard station at Long Beach.

French said the master of the ship reported that 24 Chinese crew members aboard were on the bridge, French said, "but the master reportedly feared for their safety, as well as his own."

French said the ship was located about 30 miles off San Diego.

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCMP has started to issue to its officers a "more effective service ammunition with more man-stopping power," an RCMP official said Thursday.

The new bullets, known as "wad cutters," will soon become the force's standard ammunition.

The official was not aware that any detachments have received the new ammunition, but sources in Vancouver and the interior of B.C. said officers began switching to wad cutters about two weeks ago.

A spokesman for the RCMP divisional headquarters in Victoria said none of the ammunition had been distributed among members of the force in B.C.

(The spokesman said that because the new ammunition carries a heavier load all of the police-issue .38-calibre revolvers must be changed. He said the program will be phased in over a three-year period.)

The RCMP decided to switch to wad cutters, which are "high power .38 special ammunition," after studying the effectiveness of various types of bullets. They opted for the wad cutters because of their "additional safety factor," the official said.

"There are many cases of people who were shot with .38-calibre ammunition and just soaked up lead and continued shooting back."

They also had better "man-stopping power," meaning it takes fewer shots with a wad cutter before a man is injured so seriously that he stops shooting.

Weird Dreams . . . Then a Crash Nightmare

Rookie driver Mrs. Linda Grant, 27, has had what she calls "weird dreams" lately about car accidents.

Early today she was involved in what was more like a nightmare mishap in the past, was the work of militants also responsible for nine days of unrest in black townships near Johannesburg, 950 miles to the north.

Firearms stores in Cape Town reported a run on guns by whites and one store said it sold out today.

Police commandant for the area, Col. J. H. Vorster, said commuter trains were running normally.

pend," Mrs. Grant said today. "I guess I'm lucky to be here."

Mrs. Grant said she was driving home from downtown Victoria shortly after 3 a.m. and was crossing the bridge when a car swerved in front of her and cut her off.

She said she slammed on the brakes and then "went for a ride like I was on ice."

The car skidded wildly before a wheel caught in a rut in the bridge, altering its direction and sending the vehicle crashing through a guardrail, narrowly missing a telephone pole.

The car ended up on the embankment off Songhees Road, its back end facing the water.

"It sort of teetered on top of the hill," Mrs. Grant said.

I opened the door and was about to get out when all of a sudden the car started to slide backwards. There was nothing I could do. I just held the wheel and the next thing I knew I was in the water."

Mrs. Grant stepped out and discovered she couldn't touch bottom.

"It was terrifying. I don't swim."

She said she grabbed the door and inched her way around the side of the car until she made shore, then crawled up the embankment like I was a creature in one of those movies coming out of the water."

She ran soaking wet, towards her home in Esquimalt, more than a mile away.

"I guess I just panicked . . . all I wanted to be was home."

About half way there a car stopped and the driver gave her a ride.

Victoria police learned of the accident at 3:10 a.m. when an Esquimalt Taxicab driver spotted the car in the water.

Mrs. Grant was unhurt except for bruises to her legs.

"It's funny but I've held off driving all these years because of a fear of the other guy, and the last few weeks I have been having weird dreams about car accidents," she said.

"I'm glad it's all over but let me tell you I'm still scared, still terrified every time I think about it."

Manager Man For the Job

By The Associated Press

The situation Thursday night called for a clutch hitting and manager Frank Robinson of Cleveland Indians knew just the man for the job.

"It was a tough situation but I knew the pressure wasn't going to bother me," Robinson explained. "I was the man for the situation."

Robinson sent himself up as a pinch-hitter with one out, the bases loaded and the score tied in the bottom of the ninth inning of an American League baseball game between the Indians and Texas Rangers.

He made himself look good with a line single to give the Indians a 5-4 victory over the Rangers.

If you're going to be a winning ballclub, these are the men to have to win," said Robinson. "I just felt I could make contact."

In Thursday's other American League game, New York Yankees pounded Minnesota Twins 12-5. Oakland A's shadowed Milwaukee Brewers 4-3 and Boston Red Sox edged California Angels 2-1 in 10 innings.

In National League games, Atlanta Braves defeated Philadelphia Phillies 4-3; Cincinnati Reds defeated Chicago Cubs 8-3; and San Diego Padres blanked New York Mets 3-0.

Rich Turney For Women

NEW YORK (UPI) — Chris Evert announced a further move toward dollar parity with the men in tennis competition this week when she announced a new tournament series tennis that carries $600,000 in purse money.

Evert, the 1976 Wimbledon champion, said the WTA will benefit from the inauguration of the Colgate International series by deriving 50 per cent of the gate receipts in the $200,000 event at Palm Springs, Calif., Oct. 17-24.

Evert said her first Wimbledon victory made her the first player eligible to qualify for the tournament. She'll be joined in the series by the U.S. Open champion, winners of other major tournaments and the top individual point makers in the Aug. 22-29 Federation Cup matches.

The series climaxes with a final championship that involves the first eight point leaders and the top four doubles teams.

Another Fight

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Dallas Cowboys quarterback Roger Staubach and Cincinnati Longhorns had another fistfight at the National Football League team's training camp Thursday, and Longhorns left the camp.

Only She Gets Away With it

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Only one feminine television character is carrying on a rampant affair with a married man each week in a top-rated series and the censors let her get away with it.

She's blonde and sexy and makes no bones about her sinful situation.

She's also ornery, mean and officious. Her charms are hidden beneath a shapeless costume.

But most of the scripts make it vividly clear that she and her boyfriend are getting their act together regularly.

Heaven forbid such antics would involve Mary Tyler Moore, Angie Dickinson in "Police Woman" or Cloris Leachman in "Phyllis."

Lindsay Wagner in "Bionic Woman" has some fascinating possibilities, but she too is as pure as the driven snow.

These television ladies, like "Laverne and Shirley," are all sinlessly single. If there's any hanky-panky going on, this group of unattached females is, at least, circumspect.

Such married ladies as Bea Arthur in "Maude," Jean Stapleton, delightful Edith Loretta's charms are hidden.

Bunker in "All in The Family," and Valerie Harper of "Rhoda" never stray from the fidelity of the marital bower. No adulteresses, they.

The shaggy lady in question is Maj. Margaret "Hot Lips"

Loretta Swit, the blonde charmer who portrays the scarlet woman, neither approves nor censures the sexual contortions of Hot Lips. But she's not too crazy about her either.

Unlike nurse Houlihan, Loretta is a warm, intelligent woman with a sprightly sense of humor. It is a credit to her enormous acting talent that she plays the humorless, bitchy Margaret Houlihan so deftly.

Off-screen, Loretta is softly feminine, poised and yet vulnerable — everything nurse Houlihan is not. She is, moreover, beautiful. But so complete is her characterization that Houlihan really isn't all that appealing.

"Margaret is the least likable woman on television," Loretta said. "She's lonely and frustrated, but she's not a dumb bunny."

"There she is in a field hospital in Korea surrounded by all those men and the only one who pays any attention to her is good old Frank Burns."

"They've been having an affair for four years. But she thinks nobody knows it."

Nova Looks At Space

The Viking Mission to Mars marks the climax of 14 years of exploration and discovery that has had no parallel since the discovery of the New World. In just this last decade, the volume of space that has been explored by inter-planetary unmanned spacecraft has encompassed the whole of the inner solar system.

Nova, on Tuesday, Aug. 17 at 7:30 p.m. on Channel 9, investigates this era of exploration, and considers the story of the origins and evolution of the planet Earth. The program examines the astonishing bombardment from space that greeted the birth of the planets, and the remarkable combination of fortuitous circumstances that led to Earth's developing into a beautiful blue-and-green globe teeming with life.

Nova shows how exploration — including the moon rocks and photographs of other planets — reveals secrets of our own past. The program also makes clear the fragility of our own existence.

LADY JOURNALIST in Brenda Starr, Jill St. John, checks her latest scoop in the ABC Saturday Night Movie on 4 at 8 p.m.

SOUNDS LIKELY

By JUNE GRAHAM
Can you imagine one of Horatio Alger's heroes saving his pennies so he could prance down Wall Street in a pink satin suit, high silver wedges, and eyeglasses trimmed with feathers?

Would Babe Ruth have wowed fans more if he'd slid to first base in a light-up jump suit, with a green spotlight and electronic sound effects?

Idols have changed since grandfather's time! For the new youth heroes—pop music stars—talent doesn't seem enough. The kids want lashings of make-believe, and performers have discovered that the more outre their circus act, the more gorilla growls and leaping about they offer, the louder the fans scream, and that's a heady sound few can resist.

So the fairy-tale charade goes on. People who grew up with Bing Crosby's pale and innocent warblings may look askance at what the screaming teens take seriously. But most of the colorful stars have their tongues in their cheeks through the whole frolic. A lot of fun is had by all, and the profits of the game make Alger's rags-to-riches stories sound like small potatos.

Sociologists and psychologists are licking their chops as they sort through the implications of the pop music cult.

CBC Radio has given us some fascinating glimpses of its flamboyant stars, on-stage and off-stage, zeroing in on what makes a pop star, and whether over the rainbow is the lollipop heaven it's cracked up to be.

On Sunday, August 15, at 4:05 p.m., there'll be a concert from London by the band of Elton John, the English singer-composer-pianist, who is reported to be the top money-earner in pop music history, grossing more than the Beatles at the height of their fame.

And there'll be the first of six programs about The Beach Boys, who've been called the best singles band of all time. They were a sudden hit in the '60s. Then their star waned for a bit. Now they're surfing back on a wave of nostalgia. (The series title: Variety International).

Elton John's real name is Reginald Dwight, which he felt would not look well in lights. He grew up in Middlesex with an inferiority complex, in a strict family where he "used to hide away and play Jerry Lee Lewis records at 8 rpm instead of 45 rpm, and rhyme to them."

He found he was a "natural" pianist in spite of his small hands, and won a junior scholarship to the Royal Academy of Music which, to his regret, required him to attend on Saturday mornings, when he'd have preferred to see a football match. The first band he joined was Bluesology, playing organ and piano. During the day he was a tea-boy for a music publishing company.

Later he played gigs up and down Britain and the continent, then decided he'd had enough of touring, and answered an ad for a "songwriter with talent". Lyricist Bernie Taupin also answered the ad, and he's written the words to John's songs ever since.

Their first album, Empty Sky, had a lot of airplay, but sold only about 2,000 copies. Then came Elton John, an album on which they had worked desperately hard. It appeared in May, 1970, managed to reach No. 45 on the charts, sold around 4,000 copies, and they thought that was that.

Elton formed a band and took to the road. After a few gigs in Britain, he accepted an invitation to take the band to the United States, and Bernie went along. Their first show at the Troubadour Club in Los Angeles was the turning-point in their joint careers. The audience went wild, and the Elton John legend began.

John's stage costumes grew more and more extravagant. He dressed his rather pudgy frame in glitter and mad hats. These and his leaping antics on stage kept the fans at scream level. He bought a watch ablaze with 2,200 diamonds, took to giving Rolls to his pals, and lived it up like a teenybopper's vision of a Maharajah.

But now he seems to have gotten bored with tinsel, and the real and more appealing Elton John is showing through. The man is shy but he has style. And generosity. His songs have a deep, bittersweet quality rarely found in rock music. There's more there than musical sequins.

PRAYS FOR SUCCESS

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Father Elwood Keiser, the Catholic priest who produces television's Insight series, must be convinced the Lord looks after his own.

In what appears to be a minor miracle, Insight — the half-hour religious drama syndicated on 160 stations round the country on Sunday — has been blessed with a shot at prime time.

Father Keiser, who encourages his show big friends to call him Bud, is eclesiastically ecstatic that KABC-TV in Hollywood is slotting his show at 7:30 p.m. Saturdays, not the best night of the week to save souls, but that is not the intention of Insight.

"The television industry said our kind of show could never make it in the ratings in prime time," said the priest. "But broadcasters are watching this experiment carefully with the idea of implementing it if the ratings are high."

Temporarily, at least, Hollywood has become a celestial paradise on Saturday night and, naturally Father Keiser prays for success.

Father Keiser founded Paulist Productions and for 16 years he has labored mightily to produce between 11 and 14 episodes of Insight a year, a total of 210 segments.

He works on a shoestring budget. No money comes from the church. When he isn't in production the priest is out raising donations from individuals and foundations.

Actors and crew work for minimum wages. The stars — among them Carroll O'Connor, Efrem Zimbalist, Bob Newhart, Jack Albertson, Ed Asner — turn over their paychecks to the cause.

"Our performers, writers and directors are as good or better than any commercial show," Father Keiser said.

"People will do things for God they won't do for money."

Father Keiser makes it clear that Insight is no goody-goody show dedicated to enabling the clergy. In fact, only five priests have been depicted on the series over the years along with a couple of Protestant preachers and a rabbi.

The religious message is subtle. There is no Bible-bounding.

"We have occasional violence and sex on our shows," he concluded. "But it's explicit. We deal with the beauty of sex and the futility of violence."

Painless Sunday School

The story of the wisdom of Solomon and the parable of two debtors will be presented on a rebroadcast of Marshall Efron's Illustrated, Simplified and Painless Sunday School, Sunday, Aug. 15.

Efron recreates the Bible story of Solomon, King of Israel, being granted wisdom by God and using this wisdom in resolving a case between two women, each claiming the same baby as her own.

Efron also recounts the parable of two debtors, from the New Testament, about a debtor who, forgiven his debts, then refuses the same clemency to someone owing him money and is punished for it.

Three half-hour programs in the American Life Style series will be shown on Channel 11 during August. Widely-known actor, E. G. Marshall is host as the programs delve into the diverse life styles and historical times of famous Americans by examining their homes and the style in which they lived.

The first show on Sunday, August 15 at 7 p.m. examines the life of Henry Ford, the man who changed the way America worked and moved. E. G. Marshall visits the elaborate estate "Fairlane", Ford's great historical project Greenfield Village and other places of interest and importance in the life of Henry Ford.

Revolutionary leader and President John Adams' personal life and historic times will be the topic of the American Life Style featured on Sunday, August 22. E. G. Marshall will explore the New England home of John and Abigail Adams where the great men of the time were entertained.

Changing An Image Not Easy Talented Young Actress Finds

In a world of agents, casting people and network executives, Mackenzie Phillips is finding that changing an "image" is not an easy thing to accomplish. The talented 16-year-old actress co-stars in the new comedy series, One Day at a Time, which is broadcast on the CBS Television Network, Tuesdays, (9:30-10:00 p.m.).

"I really went after the role of Julie Cooper on One Day at a Time with a vengeance," she says. "Of course, I knew the series would be a success because the man behind it, Norman Lear, is the man responsible for All in the Family, and Maude.

"But, it wasn't only the success of the series that I wanted. I wanted to play the part of Julie because it's so different from any part I've ever played. Julie is into school dances, dating, clothes and movies, and she has a generally optimistic outlook on life. She is a well-adjusted girl who loves her recently-divorced mother and has a normal 'love-hate' relationship with her younger sister."

"Up until now, almost every role I've had in movies and television has been that of a misfit, a reject, a rebel or a neurotic, and sometimes a combination of all four. In American Graffiti, I was a rejected and sulien adolescent. In Rafferty and the Goldust Twins, I was a tough runaway who carried a gun. I played juvenile delinquents on an episode of Mary Tyler Moore and in the TV special Miles to Go Before I Sleep. And I played another tough runaway in an episode of Movin' On.

"I wanted to prove to casting people and producers who might consider me for future roles that I can play a healthy, uncomplicated, well-adjusted girl who likes school boys instead of hardened criminals, and who prefers lipstick to weapons."

"There are lots of fringe benefits, too, that go along with the part of Julie Cooper. For the first time in my three-year career, I get to wear attractive clothes and have my hair done. I not only play a well-adjusted girl but I get to look absolutely great."

Family Viewing Decision Soon

By JAY SHARPUTT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Late this month, there may be a decision in the federal court scrap here over TV's so-called "family viewing" rule for entertainment shows aired in the first two prime time hours each night.

The rule says the first hour of network entertainment and that of the preceding local hour shouldn't be "inappropriate" for family viewing. It went in effect in fall 1975 amid much Hollywood grumbling.

It was adopted by the National Association of Broadcasters (NAB) and the networks after their chats with Richard E. Wiley, head of the Federal Communications Commission.

Six Faces For One Actor

COLICOS—diplomat

COLICOS—pilot

John Colicos, internationally famous Canadian actor, demonstrates his versatility and flair for comedy in Find Volopchi, a teleplay by Kaine Thomas, to be repeated in CBC-TV's Performance series, Thursday, Aug. 19 at 8 p.m.

Find Volopchi is fun, and provides Colicos the challenge of assuming six different "faces" and as many accents.

Colicos plays the title role, an evasive immigrant who keeps eluding the authorities by changing identities and occupations. In the course of the one-hour drama, he portrays Volopchi as a storefront lawyer, an aircraft passenger, a northern pilot, a TV talk show host, a British diplomat . . . and Volopchi as Volopchi. Volopchi's accents range from Canadian, to Slavic, Irish and British, and in one scene he speaks fluent French.

Ted Follows is featured as Zack, a hard-working immigration department official assigned to find Volopchi. With the aid of a computer Zack tries to anticipate where Volopchi will turn up next. In the course of the chase, the hunter develops a grudging respect for his quarry.

Teddy Moore plays reporter Barbara Mannings, who has got wind of the Volopchi case and wants to break the news story.

Find Volopchi was filmed in locations around Toronto and in Ottawa, under the direction of Rudi Dorn. Ronald Weyman is producer.

John Colicos is a performer equally at home in Canada, the United States and Britain; and he works regularly in all three. Recently, he appeared in a major U.S. television production — Benjamin Franklin. The Ambassador. His feature films include Anne of The Thousand Days, in which he played Thomas Cromwell.

Of his many stage roles, perhaps the most acclaimed was his portrayal of Winston Churchill in Hochhuth's controversial play, Soldiers, which opened in Toronto in 1968, and went on to New York, Dublin and London. He played Richard the Lion-Heart in Harry Rasky's acclaimed, ACTRA Award winning CBC television special, Next Year in Jerusalem.

The cast of Find Volopchi also includes: Ruth Springfield as Mrs. Ravonichich, Zack's secretary; John Bethune as McNee; Michael Ayoub as Bressler; Bill Kemp as Henry Hall; Bertrand Gagnon as Minot; Jonathan Welsh as Mueller; Larry Reynolds as Billy Bond; Richard Whelan as Bing Smith; Richard Davidson as Watts; Jack Mather as Freeman; Neodup Rongae as Sundrupi; Aimo Pirsakanen as Kira Yermilov.

HELEN'S REDDY TO ACT

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) —

Helen Reddy, who rarely sings a false note, hit a clunker as a singing nun in "Airport 1975," but the Australian vocalist is back in tune at Disney in her first starring role.

Helen worked at her needlepoint on the set of "Pete's Dragon," in which she costars with Jim Backus and Mickey Rooney, confident she hasn't been miscast a second time.

She is unconcerned that the transition from pop singer to movie star is not easily accomplished.

Presley did it! Streisand did it. And Frank Sinatra had no trouble at all.

But they are the exceptions.

The majority of nightclub, concert and recording stars can't pass the toughest test of all. It's the tight closeup which magnifies faces tenfold.

Helen, her hair in ringlets for her role as a turn-of-the-century New England mother, looked as if she'd been making movies for years.

"Acting is a natural thing for singers," she said. "To me every song is a different character to play as I perform. Singing is a form of acting and playing this part is just taking the music away."

"It was different in 'Airport.' I had only a few words to speak. When I sang I tried to do it as a non-professional, as a nun might. And I don't think it turned out too well."

"I play a no-nonsense woman who runs a lighthouse this time. She is strong and invincible — and does that remind you of anything?"

Helen, of course, referred to her first big record hit, "I Am Woman." The lyrics include the phrase, "I am invincible."

"I'll make other films for sure," she said. "One a year. I want to spend more time at home now."

"The amount of travelling I do is unbelievable. In 1975 I appeared in 11 countries."

"Movies are much easier. It's not the salt mines. One of the most enjoyable things about films is the camaraderie on the set. Everything else I do is solo work — records and concerts. I like to depend on other people and to work as a team."

"I've dreamed of acting in pictures all my life. So this is a dream come true for me. It doesn't surprise me at all. I'm an ambitious woman. I worked hard to get where I am."

Helen became an American citizen this year. Her accent still is strongly Australian except when she sings and, curiously, when she reads her dialogue.

"I'm supposed to have a New England accent," she said. "But I'm sounding more like a Californian I think."

Second Book By Producer

Carol Myers, producer-director of Spirit In a Landscape, Images of Canada film on the Inuit through their art, (for telecast on CBC-TV next fall, Oct. 27), will see publication of her second book in the spring of 1977. It's about Canadian pioneer artist Homer Watson (1855-1936). Her first book, Canadian Architecture 1960-70, was published in 1971.

CBC-TV Sells Two Dramas

Two CBC-TV hour dramas from past seasons, A Bird in the House (based on a story by Margaret Laurence), and The Trial of Daniel and Sinyavsky (about a real-life trial in Russia, with John Colicos starring) have been sold abroad, the former to West Germany, the latter to Ireland.

measure up in that kind of company.

"I play Sam Spade in the picture. He's a real paranoid. Thinks he's been victimized all the time. I love paranoias because they're funny. They think the whole world is against them, and that's a kick."

Books

200 Novels... and They All Have One Plot

By JUDITH MARTIN

Are you acquainted with any of the following well-born, to say nothing of ill-bred gentlemen?

The Disgraceful Duke.

The Odious Duke (no relation).

The Penniless Peer.

The Wicked Marquis. (No, not that wicked Marquis.)

The Dangerous Dandy.

The Elusive Earl (and not that earl—not the one who murdered the governess under the mistaken impression that she was his Countess).

The Cruel Count.

The Knave of Hearts.

If you don't know them, how about the Relentless Romantic, the Prolific Paperback Princess, Barbara Cartland?

Barbara Cartland is the 75-year-old Englishwoman who created this disreputable oeuvre. Each one is the title character of a separate romantic novel—just a few of her 200 novels. She wrote 19 of them last year alone.

She wrote "Love Is Innocent," "Love Is Contraband," "Love Is an Enemy," "Love Is An Eagle," "Love Is Dangerous," "The Flame Is Love," "The Fire Is Love," "The Mask of Love," "The Magic of Love," "The Karma of Love," "The Tears of Love," "Lights of Love," "An Arrow of Love," "Messenger of Love," "Love Under Fire," "Love on the Run," "Love in Hiding," "Where Is Love?," "Love to the Rescue," "Armour Against Love," "No Time for Love," "No Darkness for Love," "Conquered by Love," "Hungry for Love,"

"The Slaves of Love," "The Devil in Love," "Vote for Love," "Never Laugh at Love," "Lessons in Love," "Love Holds the Cards," "Love Forbidden" and "Love Me Forever."

And many, many more. But while Cartland's sales don't depend on one book, they do depend on one plot.

"My heroines are always virgins. I don't approve of going to bed without the ring on the finger. It's so hard to find virgins nowadays—that's why I set them in historical periods. Now, in the East, they understand virgins. I'm a riot in India, Hong Kong and Ceylon.

"My heroines always pray, and they are kind and sweet to old people and dumb animals. They're very well educated, or they read and read and so they educate themselves.

"The heroes are raffish and wicked—just what we all want. Then they get converted by the little woman. She points out that he has a duty to other people, a sort of mission, so he'll have things to do, perhaps a great estate to administer, and so he won't be bored by marriage."

She noticed that this plot has been selling better than ever for the last two years—a reaction, she feels, to the increase in pornography. "People want beauty and purity after all that. They can't go any lower, can they, so they have to go up."

In the three years that Bantam Books has been publishing Cartland paperbacks in North America—numbering each one in large, colorful letters, so the reader won't read the same one twice without realizing it—they have been selling at about 8 million copies a year. Recently, Cartland toured the United States so that people there would know "I really existed."

But in England, Barbara Cartland is known as much more than the churning out of romantic novels. She is, as she says, a "crusader." She is constantly after people about their food and health—"My recommendation on a health product triples the sales as bee resin to cure ulcers, acne and influenza—really worked, she would hold wide her arms, exhibiting her fresh complexion and boundless energy, and say "Well, look at me."

She doesn't do that any more. Not since she declared, "Well, look at me!" and then fell down the steps of the Taj Mahal. But her books, including four that are autobiographical, her articles, her speeches and her television appearances are saying "Look at me" to the romantic novel reader—the woman she pictures in a kitchen sink, staring for glamor and love.

It used to be that when Barbara Cartland was asked if her newest health discovery—such

But while her first principles—vitamins, good manners and the need for women to be "feminine" and deferential to men—are relentlessly stated in her books, bits of heretical humor dance around them in her conversation.

On the subject of marriage, for instance, she says solemnly that "I had 27 years of perfect happiness, because I worked at it. Any woman can hold the man she loves if she really tries—but you can't relax."

But when it's pointed out that the dates of her first child and her marriage to businessman Hugh McCaughdale don't match, she laughs. "Well, I married two McCaughdales. First cousins. I got the same dreadful in-laws both times. Can you imagine anyone's being so stupid?"

And when she was asked why someone so enthralled with romance never married again—McCaughdale II died in 1963 after all that perfect happiness—she replied, "It would be such an awful bore to have to tell the whole story of my life to someone again, from the beginning."

It is women who are her readers. "Women want glamor and beauty. They're fed up with reality. I take them out of themselves, poor darlings. What I write about is just as real—every woman remembers when she first fell in love. I write about the moment they had stars in their eyes."

Writing, after all, is merely a short part of her day. She

Dark Counterface of White America

By JULIAN REID

Writers come in two kinds. One is the fantasist, the dreamer of dreams in public—his visions have a life of their own, frequently bearing only a tenuous relationship to that of everyday reality. No matter: from him we ask not truth but fiction; we honor him as a pedlar of implausibilities, and honor him for his lies.

The other kind is the truth-teller. His lot is harder, for his task is to reveal to us truths about ourselves and our existence which hitherto we have held back from facing squarely. And since, unavoidably, we readers are strangers to him, the only way he can achieve this revelation is by voluntarily exposing his private self to us—by being unflinchingly honest, by standing starkly naked before our gazing eyes. Then, perhaps, we will perceive in him, as if reflected there, the outward image of our inward selves; and our own hidden truth will stand revealed in the open mirror of his shared humanity.

James Baldwin is such a truth-teller. The matter of what he has to tell is rooted in the inescapable fact of his blackness—a blackness he perceives as the dark counterface of white America, complementing it and completing it as a die is complemented by its stamp. But not just America; for what Baldwin has to tell us is relevant everywhere—that the hard reality of whiteness is stamped on the souls and faces of those our forebears stigmatized as "lesser breeds without the law."

Baldwin is at his best as an essayist; for the essay form permits him to cleave strictly to the truth of personal experience, unencumbered by fictional conventions. His finest work is rooted in autobiography—no matter how wide the canopy of his perceptions may spread, the most vigorous of them invariably draw their strength from the dark soil of his Harlem boyhood. The further his imagination strays from that spiritual Harlem, the less at home it seems, and the less incisive and assured is his writing.

Unfortunately, in the years since he gave us such masterpieces as The Fire Next Time and Notes of a Native Son, Baldwin has tended more and more to wander thus astray. His latest book, The Devil Finds Work, is a case in point.

This extended essay ostensibly deals with the portrayal of blacks in American movies; actually, it is an un-systematic excursion through what Baldwin calls "the cinema of my mind." It begins nobly. The first section treats the role of movies in Baldwin's childhood; it is only slightly inferior to his earlier excursions into his native territory, and this only because it is so intimately related to them that it cannot really stand on its own.

The second section rambles across three subsequent decades of movie-going. As always, Baldwin's observations are sharply perceptive; but the insights here are sporadic and isolated, embedded in a generally shapeless mass of literary dough.

The final section is also shapeless, but more rewarding.

In his concluding discussion of The Exorcist and how the film ingeniously avoids the essential issues of the nature of Evil that it purports to raise, Baldwin trembles vertiginously on the brink of profundity—only to draw back. The essay closes on a note of splendid, but ultimately evasive, eloquence.

Plainly, something is wrong. Not that Baldwin's perceptiveness has deserted him; not that his essential honesty is faltering. Both are very much in evidence—but something else, something vital, is missing.

Nowhere is there any sense of that electric urgency which informs all writing that simply has to be written, and consequently has to be read, because it embodies some neglected truth whose time has come at last, if only because the author has invested it with the full force of his own visionary authority. Baldwin still has a great deal to tell us; but it is as if he no longer expects us to heed him—as if the driving-spring within him has loosened and run down.

Like all truth-tellers, Baldwin is at heart a prophet—but today, alas, he is sounding increasingly like a prophet uncertain of the power with which he once held his audience captive, hanging on his every word. The old anguish, the old compassion, are still there; but muted, kept at arms-length, distanced one remove. The Devil Finds Work is not a bad book, merely a sad one—sad because it is so much less than it might have been.

THE DEVIL FINDS WORK: An Essay, by James Baldwin. Beaverbooks. $8.25.

After battling with heart disease for 17 years Julia Cook underwent a thoroughly successful open-heart operation. She died shortly afterwards because of medical negligence and bungling in her post-operative treatment.

Such cases are tragically common but, for obvious reasons, we rarely hear of them. Aside from grief which creates reticence, few people have the know-how and ability to publicize a case, and fewer still can find irrefutable proof to document such a tragedy.

One of the rare exceptions is Fred J. Cook, one of the finest investigative journalists in the U.S. Four months after his wife's needless death Cook, haunted, burdened and confounded by what had happened given the advanced surgical and therapeutic attention his wife received, told the story in a cover article in New York magazine.

The subsequent outpouring of letters from readers who had also had loved ones victimized by similar medical carelessness encouraged Cook to expand his article into a book — Julia's Story — in which he probes deeper into the details of what occurred.

What happened was that after years of simple, orthodox treatment by a general practitioner, which merely delayed the inevitable, a family friend suggested Julia should consult a cardiologist, and this advice was accepted.

The man chosen was also head of the department of medicine at a large university teaching hospital. He exuded charm and inspired confidence and the family was duly grateful. What they hadn't bargained for was that the man's self-image exceeded his interest in his patients and, pleading pressure

Happiness Is More Than a Warm Puppy

By STEPHEN HUME

Kurt Vonnegut, Jr. once wrote an article on TM (Transcendental Meditation) which he entitled, "Yes We Have No Nirvanas." Is TM like a fruit stand that sells happiness?

Happiness: The TM Program, Psychiatry, and Enlightenment will try to sell you on TM, and it just may succeed.

Selling is a major part of the TM program and the programs of the other combatants in the enlightenment war. There's EST, Gestalt Therapy, Alpha Wave Biofeedback, Krishna Consciousness, Arica, Silva Mind Control, and many, many others.

Jerry Rubin, a former radical and co-founder of the Yippie Party in American politics, wrote a book about his experiences with enlightenment therapy. The New Yorker referred to it as a "smorgasbord of the new consciousness." Again, that food metaphor. However, it's strange to find someone promising the real thing.

The founder of TM is, of course, Maharishi Mahesh Yogi. Perhaps he is best known for his publicized affair with the Beatles. Those who have seen him on television know him to be a little man with a flowing beard who laughs a lot. He is also an organizational genius, and a translator of the Bhagavad-Gita.

Maharishi says that "the purpose of life is the expansion of happiness," and few people will disagree. In a consumer society where automatic dishwashers promise happiness, it's strange to find someone promising the real thing.

From everything you read and hear about TM these days, it's obvious that it has one thing going for it, besides clean and smiling teachers. It works.

Harold Bloomfield, co-author of Happiness, will tell you the same thing. But it's interesting to read why it works, and why it sometimes doesn't.

The book is the result of the collaborations of many people, but primarily Harold Bloomfield and Robert Kory, the co-authors of TM: Discovering Inner Energy and Overcoming Stress. It's written in the first person, from the point of view of Dr. Bloomfield, who is a psychiatrist and a teacher of TM, and is entertaining reading. Fortunately, Bloomfield speaks English, not psychiatric jargon.

It all started for Dr. Bloomfield when he was an intern studying psychiatry. Fuming and exploding in a summer traffic jam, he happened to notice that the nurse sitting next to him was cool as could be. She was taking TM. Nice view.

TM works by dissolving stress. The TM technique can be described as "restful alertness." It is practised for 20 minutes, twice a day.

TM can be practised by anyone: children, teenagers, during pregnancy, or in old age. The TM technique is easy, works immediately, requires no special postures, and does not involve a change in of work, he soon relegated Julia to treatment by telephone.

It was the family's first, but by no means last, experience of the rush-rush system that has so degraded doctoring and which was to lead to Julia's untimely death. With justifiable venom, Cook refers to this cardiologist (who, happily, was ruined by the subsequent publicity) as The Great Doctor.

Julia's condition deteriorated and, far too late, The Great Doctor sent her to New York for open-heart surgery. Miraculously, she survived the operation, but criminally, she was sent home after a few days with instructions to "take your medication and be sure to have periodic blood tests." No one explained what "periodic" meant.

The medication was a blood-thinning agent and weekly blood tests were vital, but the family didn't know this. When Julia's physical and mental condition became alarming The Great Doctor who, incidentally, hadn't received a report from New York and didn't know Julia was at home, told the family to bring Julia to his hospital the following week for a blood test.

A courageous public health nurse, knowing that Julia was too ill to be moved, phoned The Great Doctor and blasted him and compelled him to agree to send a mobile testing clinic to the house. A weekend intervened and, despite urgent pleas, the clinic didn't arrive until the following Tuesday.

It was too late. Julia died in agony on the Monday from the effects of excessive blood-thinning. Had she had a simple blood test in time she would be alive today.

Understandably, Cook is a bitter man, but he keeps a tight rein on his emotions as he graphically documents his wife's suffering and needless death with the twin objectives of indicting the medical profession for its arrogant playing of God, and warning the public to be on guard against placing blind faith in Great Doctors, "for when fallible humans become convinced they cannot err, they invite catastrophe."

Cook's moving and insightful book is, in essence, the story of the horrendous communications gap between the medical or surgical specialist and the local doctor into whose care the patient is delivered after surgery, and of the largely unmet responsibility of the medical profession to educate the patient, and the patient's family.

In Julia's Story, Cook deals specifically with the sins and omissions of the U.S. medical profession, but only a chauvinist would fail to agree that the arrogance and carelessness of which he writes applies equally to the Canadian medical profession and, indeed, with the possible exception of China, is universal.

Cook's book certainly struck a responsive chord in my household. I recently underwent major surgery in Vancouver and seven days later was sent home on a stretcher, totally confused by drugs, and without any instructions as to how to proceed. My own doctor learned of my homecoming when he telephoned the Vancouver hospital to enquire about my condition.

Julia Cook will not have died in vain if Fred Cook's tragic story receives the close attention it deserves by the public, the press and, above all, the medical profession.

Shadowy Images Locked In Our Ageless Myths

By ALEX de MARCH

I was fortunate recently to have spent an afternoon at the home of George Clutesi, well-known Canadian author and artist of Port Alberni. At one point during our discussion of Canadian literature, I asked Clutesi what he, as an Indian, thought of John Gibson's book, A Small and Charming World.

"I enjoyed the book very much," Clutesi said, praising Gibson for his compelling style and thorough understanding of a difficult subject.

The subject, based on personal experiences, concerns the lives of Indians in British Columbia. A Small And Charming World was first published in 1972, and has just been re-issued in paperback edition.

The author describes his experiences with individuals and families on a number of levels, and he does it in the compassionate and yet detached manner of an accomplished writer. (Gibson, who now lives and works in Campbell River, is the author of three novels and several non-fiction works).

The North American Indian is a shadowy figure, says the author in his preface. "His image is rooted in the past, in the ageless myths of the frozen North, the pioneer and the bot-

This may be stating the obvious, but the statement accentuates something which is not quite so obvious to most of us — that there are still pitifully few Canadians for whom the Indian is much more than a shadowy figure.

A Small And Charming World is not a textbook on sociology. Neither is there any attempt on the part of the author to throw, in the conventional way, some light on this hidden figure.

Instead, Gibson gradually and skilfully leads you into this small world and lets you participate in and experience its existence.

In a way, the author takes the reader on a mystery voyage which soon becomes a voyage of discovery. It leads to the isolated places inhabited by groups of Indians scattered along the rugged B.C. coast, across the straits around the Queen Charlotte Islands and the mainland, where the valley of the Skeena River drives a deep wedge into the mountains.

The people who inhabit this wilderness are "an irritant on the thick skin of bureaucracy," says the author, "a nuisance to quieten as best one can... we can neither comprehend their way of life nor leave them alone."

Gibson, who came to Canada from Britain, knows his subject. He is on the staff of the provincial department of human resources and has for many years worked among Indians.

From his intimate knowledge we learn that the "Indian problem" is not necessarily the problem of the Indian people, but of the whites who have "so badly blundered in their dealings with North America's indigenous population."

"The problem seems to be that the Indian is quite unlike the white man in his way of life and his values. His ideas of time are different. His relations with his family are different. And his ambitions are different."

There are many passages in A Small And Charming World steeped in the mystic air of Indian culture — enigmatic yet revealing — as during the author's encounter with an old Indian woman who did not speak the white man's tongue: "My remarks were translated into the Tsimshian language, but the real communication was beginning to take place. The grandmother looked into my eyes, observed my hands, made me aware that she was willing to trust me if I so desired. This was always a critical moment, because you had to know what was taking place."

"You had to remain silent so that the person you were with received, so to speak, your acknowledgement."

"Had I, at that instant, continued to chatter about government policy, I would have failed and my words would have been dismissed. To talk into such silence was like interrupting a vital statement. It was inexcusable."

When A Small And Charming World was first published, it earned excellent reviews. Today, the opinion that the book is on its way to becoming a classic is shared by many. Its current paperback publication should enable this fine work to gain the wide readership it deserves.
